INVITATION TO THE WORLD

Nixon: 'Come And Party'

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—President Nixon said today the United States will invite the world to its 200th birthday party, so that the children of those who stayed behind when others immigrated to America can "see what wonders your countrymen have worked in this new land."

He predicted 28 million would come.

In his Independence Day address, Nixon said he was preparing to issue an "unprecedented icvitation to the world" to visit the United States during the bicentennial celebration year of 1976.

He appealed to the travel industry to try to put a vacation trip to the United Stetes within the economic reach of more foreigners, and asked Americans to open their homes to visitors from abroad.

The invitation, Nixon said, would be issued in conjuction with Festival USA, one of three main themes for the nation's bicentennial celebration, which he promised would be "as wide as America's land and as richly diverse as its people."

The President made his remarks in an Independence Day address prepared for delivery over nationwide radio from his office at the Western White House.

The invitation is appropriate because the United States "is, and always has been, a nation of nations," Nixon said.

"The blood of all peoples runs in our veins; the cultures of all peoples contribute to our culture; and to a certain extent the hopes of all peoples are bound up with our own hopes for the continuing success of the American experiment," he said.

He said the bicentennial was "a time for America to say to the nations of the world 'You helped to make us what we are. Come and see what wonders your countrymen have worked in this new country of ours. Come and let us say thank you. Come and join in our celebration of a proud past. Come and share our dreams of a bright future."

Nixon gave only the broad outlines of the planned celebrations, which are being coordinated by the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, established by Congress in 1966.

Of the other two themes, one called Heritage '76 will focus on the nation's history during the past two centuries and the other—Horizons '76—will involve setting goals for the third century, he said.

Nixon said he would send formal and official invitations to governments around the globe and urged Americans to participate in people-to-people contacts with the millions of visitors he predicted would accept the invitation.

Nixon called on corporations with foreign branches; U.S. municipalities with sister cities abroad; Americans with overseas relatives; shipping lines; airlines; all to join in the campaign to urge foreigners to ac-

South's Recapture Of Quang Tri Set

Team Arrives By Copter In Capital

SAIGON (UPI) — A 30-man South Vietnamese reconnaissance team landed by helicopter in the center of Quang Tri city today, paving the way for a government move to recapture the provincial capital held by the Communists for more than two months.

Military sources said the team met only light resistance. A 1,000-man South Vietnamese force moved into the suburb of Mai Linh only one-half mile away earlier in the day and also reported only light resistance.

Another small force also moved unopposed into Quang Tri combat base two miles northwest of the city. The base is the former home of the U. S. 1st Brigade, 5th Mechanized Infantry Division. It was turned over to the South Vietnamese one year ago.

Despite the apparent disappearance of Communist troops, U. S. advisers said they expected a tough fight ahead. An estimated 48,000 North Vietnamese soldiers took part in tte drive to capture Quang Tri province and the capital on May 1 and the troops are still believed to be in the area.

"We expect to have a hell of a fight there. We expect to have to fight our way all the way in," one U. S. adviser told UPI correspondent Barney Seibert who is accompanying government forces.

Two dozen miles to the south, Communist gunners shelled the city of Hue for the third consecutive day in an apparent move to take some of the push out of the South Vietnamese mese attempt to recaptare Quang Tri. At least two civilians were killed and eight wounded.

Two-thirds of Hue's 30,000 defenders were pulled oat of the city and sent north in the drive into Quang Tri.

While South Vietnamese columns moved up Highway 1, Communist gunners slipped in from the west and started shelling Hue and the half-dozen outposts on its western flank.

Since the drive started one week ago, government spokesmen said more than 1,100 North Vietnamese troops have been killed. Government losses were placed at 50 dead and 235 wounded.

The Communists started their offensive on March 30 by moving across the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) into Quang Tri, South Vietnam's northernmost province. They routed government troops and took control of the province on May 1.

The current drive is the first concerted South Vietnamese attempt to recaptive the province, the first ever taken by the Communists.

Seibert said dozens of South Vietnamese tanks and armored personnel carriers were moving northward across cross the My Chanh River into the province.

The North Vietamese shelled the troops with 105mm artillery pieces they captured from the South Vietnamese earlier.

Seibert said the gunners were trying to knock out pontoon bridges set up by the government and one 30-round barrage blew a foot-wide hole in a major bridge five miles south of Quang Tri city. Seibert said the bridge was still in good shape and drove across it in a jeep.

In fighting elsewhere in Quang Tri Province, Seibert reported 102 North Vietnamese killed at a cost of only two government troops wounded in six skirmishes this morning.

In a delayed report, the U.S. command said Navy ships from the 7th fleet for the second consecutive day Friday shelled barges unloading supplies from freighters off the coast of North Vietnam. The barges were apparently trying to circumvent mines seeded in the waters of seven North Vietnamese ports two months ago.

McGovern Delegate Plea On

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The U. S. Court of Appeals convened on Independence Day today to hear suits by Sen. George S. McGovern and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley. They want to overturn separate Democratic Party decisions about delegates to the presidential nominating convention.

The court set morning hearings times for McGovern backers, who are trying to hold California's 271 delgates; and the Daley supporters, who are trying to be reinstated.

Daley and 58 other delegates from Chicago were ousted from the Illinois bloc for failing to follow the party's reform rules in gaining their seats.

The Democratic Credentials Committee stripped McGovern of 153 California delegates, delcaring that the state's winner-take-all primary violated the spirit of the reforms.

A three-judge panel agreed to hear the McGovern and Daley pleas even before their suits were turned down in U.S. District Court yesterday.

District Court Judge George L. Hart, announcing that the appellate court would review his decisions regardless, decreed that the party had acted properly in unseating Daley's delegation and stripping McGovern of 153 delegates.

Hart noted that both decisions can be brought before the full convention for reconsideration when it convenes in Miami Beach next week.

Whether a winner-take-all primary is fair is "something to be determined by the convention itself and is not a matter for this court," Hart said to McGovern's backers. He said the issue did not raise a constitutional question.

Hart also sustained the Credential Committee's order unseating the Daley delegation. To the Daley people, he said, their attorney Jerome Torschen failed to show that all the reasons given for rejecting the delegation were unconstitutional.

Hart also rejected a Democratic National Committee request for a injunction against an Illinois State Court. That court is to rule Wednesday on a Daley bid for an injunction to prevent the convention from seating the insurgent delegation that replaced Daley's delegation.

Hart noted that Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist denied the request Saturday. "You are asking me to do what a U.S. Supreme Court justice couldn't do."

BOBBY ALIGHTS — U.S. Grand Master Bobby Fischer walks down a plane ramp today after finally arriving in Reykjavik, Iceland, for a 24-game chess series against Russias's Boris Spassky for the world title. Spassky, however, has refused to play Fischer. (UPI Telephoto)

FISCHER 'INSULTED ME'

Spassky Walks Out —Tourney In Doubt

Match officials postponed the opening of the tournament for the second time but did not set a new starting date.

Spassky said he would not yet leave Iceland and left the door open to a possible solution.

"I still want to play the match if there is a solution," Spassky said. "I will not play today. I will make my decision in the next few days."

In a statement datelined in Reykjavik, Tass, the official Soviet news agency, quoted Spassky as saying Fischer broke the rules by refusing to show up for the opening ceremonies last Saturday.

"By this, Fischer insulted me personally and the chess federation of the USSR which I represent," Spassky said.

Fischer delayed the tournament for two days while he haggled for more money. He finally agreed to play after a British banker agreed to double the prize money.

It was not clear exactly what effect Spassky's refusal would have on the match, which was scheduled to start at 1 p.m. EDT today.

Spassky earlier stalked out of a meeting set to determine who would get the firsl move in the Author Pearl Buck Is Hospitalized

RUTLAND, Vt. (UPI)—Nobel and Pulitzer prize-winning author Pearl S. Buck was in "stable condition" in Rutland hospital Monday where she was admitted Saturday suffering from pleurisy.

The 80-year-old resident of Danby, Vt., who has written about 80 books, is working on four new novels while supervising the restoration of several buildings at an antique center she is setting up.

North, South Korea Agree To Work For Peaceful Reunification

SEOUL (UPI) —North and South Korea, divided for 27 years, agreed today to work for peaceful reunification of the country.

The agreement, reached through negotiations so secret that even Korean diplomats expressed surprise, was issued simultaneously in Seoul and the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

The two nations, which have been technically at war since 1950 and have refused to recognize each other, agreed not to "undertake armed provocations against each other" and decided "to promote mutual understanding and expedite peaceful unification" of the Korean peninsula.

(In San Clemente, Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren said President Nixon viewed the development as "an encouraging indication of lessening of tensions in the area which could have a favorable impact on the prospects for peace and stability on the Korean peninsula.")

The agreement was signed by Lee Hu Rak, director of the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), and Kim Young Joo, director of North Korea's Organization and Guidance Department.

Lee described the agreement as a move from "a confrontation without dialogue into a confrontation with dialogue" and added: "Their (North Korea's) sincerity will decide whether the agreement is going to be a success or not. For our part, we pledge our utmost sincerity."

Lee said the agreement was reached after highly secret visits in May and June by officials of both countries. He said he proposed the meetings in March and traveled to Pyongyang in May for two sessions with North Korean Premier Kim Il Sung. May 29 through June 1, he said, North Korean Vice Premier Park Sung Chul came to Seoul for talks with President Park Chung Hee.

The communique came as a shock to officials who knew nothing of the sessions. Lee said the decision to hold the meetings was made without consulting the United States or any other third country. One South Korean diplomat in Tokyo said, "I've never been so surprised in my life."

Short of official recognition of each other, the exchange of visits represented a tacit understanding that there are two Koreas. Previously, neither recognized the existence of the other and both claimed they represented the entire peninsula.

The two Koreas began moves toward reconcilition in August last year when Choi Doo-Sun, president of the South Korean Red Cross Society, proposed a plan for reuniting 10 million families separated by formation of the two nations.

It was the first direct contact between the North and South Korean governments since the peninsula was divided along the 38th parallel when World War II ended in 1945.

Death Ban Vote Urged By Younger

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The U.S. Supreme Court has not outlawed the death penalty, but only restricted its use, so Californians should be allowed to vote on whether they want it restored, according to State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger.

Younger said that as the law currently stands, by his interpretation, the death penalty "is constitutional under certain circumstances in 49 states. But it's unconstitutional under all circumstances in California."

That is because the state Supreme Court went farther than the U.S. Supreme Court in ruling on capital punishment, Younger said.

The state court declared the death penalty violated the prohibition in the state constitution against "cruel or unusual" punishment.

Despite what he called earlier "overreaction," Younger said that after a study of the U.S. court's fragmented decision on the issue, "I have concluded that the U.S. Supreme Court has not found the death penalty unconstitutional per se. It would be permissable under certain circumstances."

He said it is "proper and essential" therefore that the death penalty initiative, putting the matter before the state's voters, remain on the November ballot.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Wallace Leaves

SILVER SPRING, Md. (UPI) —Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama left Holy Cross Hospital briefly yesterday for the first time since he was severely wounded May 15 at a Laurel, Md., shopping center.

A hospital spokesman said he understood the Democratic presidential candidate had lunch with friends.

Wallace is to be discharged from the hospital Friday. He will fly in an Air Force hospital plane placed at his disposal by President Nixon to Montgomery, Ala., and later will go on to Miami Beach for the Democratic National Convention.

Truman Hospitalized

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI)— Former President Harry S Truman, described as "happy and cheerful," spent Independence Day in a seventh floor hospital room where he is undergoing tests to diagnose his intestinal problems.

Truman, 88, whose public appearances on July 4th celebrations have become a tradition in his hometown, nearby Independence, Mo., was hospitalized Sunday and has remained in "satisfactory" condition since.

Doctors would not predict how long he will remain hospitalized.

Truman last gave an Independence Day speech in 1966, but more recently limited his July 4th activities to sitting on the front porch of the Truman homestead with his wife Bess to watch a parade pass by.

Today, doctors called for a second round of tests in an effort to pinpoint Truman's digestive ailment.

Talks Continue

BONN (UPI)—French President Georges Pompidou and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt strove today to smooth out differences encountered in two days of Franco-German talks.

A private meeting between the two leaders lasted 20 minutes longer than the planned half hour. And delayed the start of the concluding plenary meeting between the two delegations.

French spokesman Jean-Philippe Lecat said there was no sign of agreement on a common approach to the current monetary crisis.

McGovern Backer

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Jerry Wurf, president of the 550,000-member American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Union, today will endorse Sen. George S. McGovern for President, sources said.

Sources close to Wurf emphasized that the union leader would make a formal announcement, speaking only for himself. They said the union's newly elected secretary-treasurer, William Lucy, concurred in the endorsement.

Wurf had endorsed Sen. Edmund S. Muskie before the primaries began in March. Wurf no longer feels committed to Muskie since he withdrew before the primaries were finished, the sources said.

Woodcock's Choice

DETROIT (UPI) — Leonard Woodcock yesterday said he will support Sen. George S. McGovern for the Democratic party's nomination for the presidency as the way to maintain a "society of law."

Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, had supported Edmund Muskie until the Maine senator withdrew from the primaries. Woodcock said the rules had been upset when the party denied McGovern 153 of California's convention delegates.

"To upset the rules after the game is bad," he said. "It's going to drive the young people away from the Democratic party . . ."

Joint Space Flight Talks

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Twenty-five Soviet space officials will arrive Thursday for two weeks of talks about the 1975 joint space flight, the Manned Spacecraft Center announced Monday.

The delegation, lej by Boris N. Petrov, chairman of the Soviet Intercosmos Council, and Konstatine D. Bushuyev, Soviet director of the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project (ASTP), will arrive Thursday morning.

Glynn S. Lunney is manager of the ASTP for NASA.

Burial Set Thursday For Mormon Patriarch Smith

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI)— Joseph Fielding Smith, the late Mormon patriarch, will be buried Thursday after funeral services at the Salt Lake tabernacle.

Smith, 95, died Sunday of a heart attack after serving 2 1-2 years as president of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

The man expected to succeed him as prophet, seer, revelator and spiritual leader for more than 3 million Mormons said of Smith that he was a man whose "purpose in life could well be penned in one sentence—'his was an eye single to the glory of God in bringing to pass the immortality and eternal life of man'."

"We who have been his closest associates knew of his kindness, his gentleness and his concern for others,' said Harold B. Lee, 73, senior member of the Council of the Twelve Apostles, the group which runs the church.

President Nixon said he and Mrs. Nixon were "deeply saddened to learn of the death of Joseph Fielding Smith."

The white-haired Smith, who was a member of the Council of the Twelve for 62 years, was known as a historian and theological conservative.

He outlived three wives and left 140 children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Judge Won't Drop Charge On Ellsberg

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The judge in the Pentagon Papers case ordered prosecutors Monday to let him see any government letters or memos that would reveal the Justice Department's motives for prosecuting Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony J. Russo.

The judge denied a defense motion to dismiss the charges as discriminatory however. He sliced his way through a thicket of pretrial motions, apparently clearing the way for the long delayed trial to begin next Monday.

Lawyers for Ellsberg and Russo filed motions requesting the charges be dismissed, on the grounds that what the defendants are charged with — and admit—doing, making public classified information to inform people, is done all the time by government officials up to the President.

Since these countless leaks are never investigated or prosecuted, the defense argued, charges were brought against Ellsberg and Russo not because of the actions involved, but because they are antiwar activists.

They are charged with grand theft, espionage and conspiracy for actions they took in making public the Pentagon Papers, a classikied report on the Vietnam War that was leaked to the New York Times and other newspapers.

U.S. District Judge Matt Byrne Monday turned down the defense request for a pretrial hearing into the practice of leaking classified material to newsmen in Washington. Defense lawyers said they were prepared to call witnesses— including newsmen and government officials up to former White House aides—who would prove that it is a common practice and generally goes uncriticized and unpunished.

2 Top State Demos Against McGovern

SACRAMENTO, Calif (UPI) —Two of the State's highest ranking Democratic officials today sided against George McGovern and said they support the move to strip him of 153 California delegates.

One, state women's chairman Blanche Goldstein, also complained McGovern's California delegation includes too many "novices" and not enough "mainstream" party workers and added, "I really felt badly about not being chosen as a delegate."

The other, Northern California chairmen John Merlo, said it is "absurd" that some key McGovern supporters now are hinting at backing a third-party candidate or not helping the Democratic nominee if the South Dakotan loses the nomination.

Neither official has endorsed a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Their comments, offered in telephone interviews, point out the division among California Democrats in the aftermath of last week's decision by the party credentials committee to, in effect, invalidate the state's June 6 winner-take-all primary.

The committee divided the state's entire bloc of 271 delegates, which McGovern thought he had won, among candidates on the basis of their primary vote. McGovern got 118 delegates, Hubert Humphrey 104 and seven other divided the remainder.

McGovern has sponsored a court suit challenging the credentials committee ruling and has promised a floor fight when the Democratic national convention convenes next Monday in Miami Beach.

A co-chairman of McGovern's California delegation, Assemblyman Willie Brown of San Francisco, said if the South Dakota senator does not regain the 153 delegates and loses the nomination, "the Democratic nominee will be finished in California. Richard Nixon will win easily."

But Mrs. Goldstein, a longtime activist in Sacramento politics who worked her way up to Referring party office, said "I don't think a lot of people will sit on their hands.

"The young people might because for them this has become a cause celebre. It's their first time out to bat. They don't know the ropes. They really don't. They're novices."

She added, "I think the winner-take-all primary system is bad. The credentials committee acted as it saw it. I don't disagree."

Merlo, a Chico attorney, said "I think the committee did the right thing" because the winner-take-all system conflicts with the one-man, one-vote principle.

Refering to 192 party reform guidelines written by a commission originally chaired by McGovern, Merlo said "reform is reform. And you don't reform 80 per cent."

Their views on the controversial issue differ sharply with those of state party chairman Charles T. Manatt, who favors abolishing the winner-take-all system during the 1976 presidential election but not suddenly this year after the primary and before the convention.

No White House Probe In Bugging Of Demo HQ

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI)—The White House has turned down an appeal from the Democratic party for a special investigation of the alleged attempt to bug Democratic headquarters.

The incident is already being investigated by the FBI, and the request from Democratic party chairman Larry O'Brien is for political purposes, commented Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler Monday.

From Miami Beach, O'Brien responded by saying the refusal indicates the President and his reelection advisers "indeed have something to hide."

Washington police last month arrested five men in the Watergate Hotel, in the Democratic party's office suite, carrying electronic eavesdropping equipment. One of the suspects, James W. McCord Jr., is a former CIA and FBI agent who was under contract as a security adviser to the Republican National Committee and Nixon's reelection campaign.

O'Brien wrote President Nixon asking for a special federal investigation and then repeated the request in a telegram.

Asked about the requests by newsmen, Ziegler said "I'm not going to have any reaction from the President of the United States to anything that Larry O'Brien sends around.

"Larry O'Brien sends these things around obviously for public relations reasons ... I think Mr. O'Brien well knows that it is clear that this matter is being investigated thoroughly and completely."

He said the FBI and "appropriate investigative authorities" were looking into the incident.

O'Brien accused Nixon of taking "a cavalier and cynical" attitude toward "the blatant act of political espionage against the Democratic party.

"I can only conclude that the President, the White House and the Nixon reelection apparatus indeed have something to hide," the rival party leader said.

Magee Asks Court For Interviews

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Convict Ruchell Magee filed a mimeographed, pencil-signed petition yesterday asking the California Supreme Court to allow him to give news interviews.

Magee, former co-defendant of Angela Davis in connection with the 1970 Marin County shootings, said he was being denied an opportunity to answer the "false lies" and "half defametory" stories he accused the state attorney general's office of publishing.

His petition said state officials were entering "into a statewide racism conspiracy" of illegally silencing him in spite of a May 12, 1972 court order granting him permission to talk with a reporter.

San Quentin Prison officials later won a state appellate court decision upholding Warden Louis B. Nelson's right to refuse a reporter access to the prison for the inteview.

"May state agents deviate from their own constitution to deny the petitioner access to the press without violating the California Constitution?" Magee asked in the document.

Magee, charged with murder, kidnap and conspiracy in the Aug. 7, 1970 courthouse gunbattle in which a judge died, said officials used false IQ documents to deceive judges into believing he was incompetent to defend himself.

Miss Davis' case was separated from Magee's last year after Magee filed dozens of petitions that delayed proceedings. Miss Davis was acquitted of all charges in a 13-week trial that ended recently.

NAACP Chief Raps Nixon Busing Stand

DETROIT (UPI)—President Nixon's strong antibusing stand could bring blacks "a lot of allies who have been hanging around in the wings" and rejuvenate the civil rights movement of the 1960s, a top NAACP official aid Monday.

"It may just be that the actions of the President and his advisers, of the congressmen feeding on backlash, of the Nixonized Supreme Court, will provide the impetus needed to revitalize the great coalition of the sixties," said Bishop Stephen G. Spottswood, chairman of the board of directors of the civil rights group.

Spottswood set a tough tone in his remarks made at the opening meeting of the 63rd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in this city inflamed over anticipated cross-district busing. His most stinging remarks to the 2,300 delegates were aimed at Nixon.

"Before the President and his Constitution-wreckers get through, there will be a whole lot of Americans besides black Americans who will witness the gutting of civil rights," said Spottswood, 58th bishop of the AME Zion Church.

"If the courts can be stopped from enforcing the Constitution in education, they can be stopped in housing, employment, public accommodations and the administration of justice," he said.

"Nothing is a better measure of the seriousness of today's peril than the so-called busing issue," he said. "Who could ever have supposed that the question of how children ride to school would become the test of candidates for the presidency, for the U.S. Senate, for seats in Congress and in governors' mansions?"

Spottswood received thunderous applause after each attack on Nixon. Gov. William G. Milliken of Michigan, a life member of the NAACP, got a polite but unenthusiastic reception when he told the group he is with blacks "in this long march" for equality.

As the annual meeting opened, some delegates sought support for a resolution to overturn an unofficial tradition that the elected president of the NAACP is white. The civil rights group never has had a black president in its 63 years.

Heading the drive is Jack E. Robinson, 42, the black president of the NAACP's Boston branch, who said "the time has come for blacks to have equal opportunities within the top office of our own organization."

The chairman of the convention, Black Chicago Attorney William R. Ming, said any resolution barring whites from occupying the presidency is illegal. The current President is Kivie Kaplan, 68, a retired Boston businessman and a white, while the group's executive director, Roy Wilkins is black—an example of internal integration, according to Kaplan.

RETIREMENT — Rachael Munn, who has retired after 25 years as a postal clerk, 20 of them in Corte Madera, smilingly helps her final customers.

25 YEARS' SERVICE

Corte Madera Postal Clerk Steps Aside

By PAT PERRY

Rachael Munn is a familiar figure to anyone who's ever bought a stamp at the Corte Madera Post Office. She's been selling them there for the last 20 years as a postal clerk.

When Mrs. Munn began her duties in Corte Madera, she vowed to know every customer personally, and today still recognizes most patrons.

Mrs. Munn retired Friday after 25 years as a postal clerk — she was at Sausalito and Marin City before transferring to Corte Madera. Fellow workers at the Corte Madera facility honored her with a party.

Now in retirement at her home on Meadowsweet Drive, Corte Madera, Mrs. Munn, 65, may finally get around to doing something she's been putting off for years — getting her stamp collection into some sort of order.

For, despite a quarter of a century of handling stamps every day, Mrs. Munn is still mad about stamps. New American stamps.

She's collected every new issue of American stamps — in plateblocks — since 1943.

"Yes, I suppose it must be a unique collection," she said, "but it isn't catalogues or anything, you know, most of them are just stuck in old envelopes."

How many does she have?

"I've no idea, must be thousands I suppose. I've never belonged to a stamp club or anything, you understand, I just collect them because I like them. I like the colors and the designs. It's from selling them, you get interested.

"I like the Apollo series best, I think, and there was an Arizona series one time I thought was beautiful. They should have a San Francisco series some day."

A native of Trenton, Mo., Mrs. Munn came to California in 1942 when her husband went to work at Marinship in Sausalito. She worked in the cafeteria there for some time, and also at the Hamilton Air Force Base cafeteria.

"But as soon as I began working in the post office as a window clerk, I enjoyed it," she recalled, "and I've never got bored the whole time. I've liked meeting the people and I've made a lot of interesting friends."

Her husband died ten years ago. Mrs. Munn's only son and five grandchildren live in Hawaii and she makes frequent trips to visit them. She also intends to visit her sister in Missouri.

And how about the stamps?

"I've already told everybody here to keep me a plateblock of every new stamp that comes out."

$9.8 Billion Assessment Price Tag

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— City assessor Joseph E. Tinney put a $9.8 billion price tag on San Francisco yesterday.

Tinney announced the record cash value assessment, which was $330 million higher than in 1971.

The increase reflected $138 million in new construction, including several major new downtown hotels, and a $165 million upward adjustment of the value of 21,000 residential and commercial properties in middle to upper class neighborhoods from the Marina and Pacific Heights to Sea Cliff.

With assessed valuation for property taxes set at 25 per cent of market value, the appraisal increased the city tax base by $82.5 million. At the current tax rate, the reassessment would bring in an additional $10.5 million a year in revenue.

However, controller Nathan B. Cooper said his latest reading of city spending for the next fiscal year indicates at least $20 million in additional property tax revenues will be needed — requiring a tax rate hike.

Classroom Renovation To Be Studied

Tamalpais High School District trustees next Monday will wrestle with the problem of financing renovation of classrooms and other buildings.

Their meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in the faculty lounge at Redwood High School, Larkspur.

Assistant Supt. Robert D. Torrey will report that needed renovation of 60 Tamalpais High School classrooms may require up to $400,000. Expanding the locker room at Redwood High School has been deferred since 1967, when its cost was estimated at $260,000.

Torrey will report that even increasing the district's operating tax rate a maximum 7 cents per $100 assessed valuation could bring in only $266,000. The special reserve building fund contains only $250,000.

The recent Serranto-Priest court decision may mean an end to property tax for such projects, as early as the district's 1973-74 budget, Torrey said.

He added that the district faces conflicting indications on enrollment. Traditional predictions based on childbirth rates and other data indicate that the district's student load will continue to dwindle.

On the other hand, more new homes were built in the district last year than any years since 1962. The year's total was three times the annual construction start rate for the last five years, Torrey said.

More than 600 new residential units were under construction in the first five months this year, but many of them were apartments and townhouses, and "I do not believe there is cause for panic," Torrey said.

The trustees also are scheduled to consider adoption of the annual publication budget, even though a final report on administrative salary recommendations has been postponed from July 10 to the Aug. 7 meeting.

Tentative agreement has been reached giving the administrators an average 3.25 per cent cost of living increase, but ending the traditional ration between administrative and teachers' salaries in favor of a ration based on the salary of the educational leader in each high school.

Mill Valley Council To Hear Ordinances

The Mill Valley City Council will consider two proposed ordinances which would affect the future of land development around upper Ricahrdson Bay in East Mill Valley at its meeting at 8 p.m. tomorrow.

A public hearing will be held on an ordinance that would impose a one-year moratorium on all building in the affected area. The ordinance was designed to give the city time to prepare a master plan for East Mill Valley.

If adopted, the ordinance would prohibit construction, development or use of any property unless a specific use permit is granted by the city.

The proposed one-year moratorium — which could be renewed for a second year — applies even to those uses of property which are compatible with current zoning.

The ordinance has already passed its first reading and could be adopted by the city council at tomorrow's meeting.

The council will also consider an ordinance that would enable the city to prohibit any excavation, filling or construction in the tidelands area surrounding Richardson Bay.

The draft ordinance was written to provide the city with a means to protect the wildlife and natural beauty of the marshlands.

Children Receive Summer Treat Of Huge Popsicle

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) —A 310-pound cherry popsicle made of 33 gallons of water and seven gallons of syrup was devoured by 500 children Sunday.

The children made quick work of the summer-time treat that required 27 hours to freeze.

A refrigerated truck hauled the popsicle to a grassy site near the sponsoring Church of the Nazarene and kids were turned loose. Within minutes all that remained was a giant stick, about six feet long, two feet wide and six inches thick.

American Newsman Invited To China

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Journalist Sam Jaffe will visit mainland China in early August at the invitation of the Chinese Foreign Ministry.

Jaffe, 42, a special correspondent for United Press International, was the first western newsman to interview Chinese Prime Minister Chou En-lai after the Communist takeover in 1950. He obtained the exclusive interview in 1955 at the Conference of Nonaligned African and Asian Nations in Bandung, Indonesia.

Contempt Ruling Is Reversed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Contempt convictions against two women who refused to answer questions about the Black Panther Party and the operation of its newspaper were reversed Monday by an appellate court.

"When first amendment interests are at stake, the government must use a scalpel, not an ax," said the 9th Circuit Court of Appeal in the case of Sherrie Bursey, 20, and Brenda Presley, 24.

The two women were employed by the Black Panther newspaper in 1970 when they made a series of appearances before a special grand jury investigating an alleged threat on the life of President Richard Nixon by the party's chief of staff, David Hilliard.

'Quota System' Not Lone Police Charge

During its eight-month investigation of the Sausalito Police Department, the outgoing Marin County Grand Jury heard charges against the department other than those relating to a quota system of arrests, jurors revealed yesterday.

In a report released yesterday, the jury said information on the additional charges has been turned over to a Sausalito City Council committee which is investigating Sausalito police. The report declined to specify the nature of the accusations.

The report stressed jurors did not turn over confidential transcripts to the council committee, as the jury was "not free to violate their confidentiality." Jury foreman Milen C. Dempster said the information presented to the council was given without revealing sources.

The jury stated it had earlier turned over the additional charges against Sausalito police to the district attorney who had advised the jury the allegations were "not criminal and not appropriate either for criminal or accusatory proceedings."

"This matter therefore properly lies with the citizens of Sausalito," the report concluded, and the jury urged those with complaints against the police to take them to the council's investigating committee.

In March the grand jury released a report charging that the equivalent of a quota system of arrests existed in Sausalito, recommending the removal of the department's three top administrators, Chief James D. Wright, Capt. R. David Malkin and Lt. William Fraas.

Faced with the jury's recommendation, the Sausalito Police Officers Association in May won a temporary stay against further investigation on the grounds the jury had overstepped its jurisdiction.

However, Judge E. Warren McGuire of Marin Superior Court lifted the ban, stating the report was "clearly a matter of public interest and the investigation and report thereon constitute a legitimate inquiry into possible criminal or corrupt activity."

The state First Court of Appeal upheld the ruling without comment last week.

Dempster said yesterday the jury did not mention the other accusations against the police in its March report because the jury had been asked by Sausalito city officials only to look into charges of a quota system and was not empowered to go beyond that request.

In April the city council issued a detailed rebuttal of the jury's original report on Sausalito police, then appointed a two-man council committee to investigate the department.

The committee — councilmen Stephen A. Fraser and Earl F. Dunphy — is currently taking testimony on department activities from police officers and citizens who have grievances.

Jury Scores Treatment Of Convicts

The Marin County Grand Jury has criticized as "harsh and unreasonable" the treatment of inmates in San Quentin Prison's adjustment center following the Aug. 21 violence in which three guards and three inmates were killed.

In a report released yesterday, the jury chastised prison officials for the tight lockup imposed in the adjustment center from August to March. It recommended that all inmates at San Quentin, including those in the adjustment center, be permitted an hour of daily outdoor exercise.

The report, prepared by the jury's administration of justice committee, also called for Marin County supervisors to appoint a liaison committee "to alert the Marin Community to general needs and problems of the prison."

The committee compalined that the 20-to-24 convicts in the center were locked in their cells for 24 hours a day for seven months after the August uprising.

In an interim report on the center released to county supervisors in February, the jury had noted that inmates were not allowed to leave their cells for exercise or recreation and were permitted outside only for showers twice a week and for trips to the visitors room.

Yesterday the jury noted that the practice of allowing center prisoners into the hallways for one hour a day had been restored by the prison staff in March.

The jury also suggested the State of California provide San Quentin with the "physical setup and staff" to permit all prisoners one hour of outdoor exercise daily in good weather, "provided this can be done without endangering life."

San Quentin Warden Louis J. Nelson could not be reached yesterday for comment on the jury's report.

cept the invitation—and then to help act as host to them.

"Volunteers young and old can serve as guides, as interpreters, as hosts and hostesses, to help greet a flood of bicentennial guests which may be double the nearly 14 million persons who visited the United States last year," Nixon said.

Such contacts, he said, would go a long way in "reducing the fear and the ignorance which have divided mankind down through the ages."

The bicentennial commission has been criticized from some quarters for moving too slowly in preparing for the celebrations, but Nixon promised it would follow up his announcement with a vigorous action program.

He asked the travel industry to redouble efforts to bring the costs of lodging, meals and transportation within the reach of visitors and people throughout the country to open their "hearts and homes and communities to those who come to America for the first time."

DEATH

ment are demanding the initiative be removed, on the grounds that since the U.S. Supreme Court has banned the death penalty, it would be a waste of time and the taxpayers' money to conduct a futile referendum.

Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. is studying the arguments, and is expected to issue a ruling this week on whether the issue will remain on the ballot.

If passed, the measure would allow the state legislature to make the death penalty mandatory for certain specified crimes.

Younger said this would be allowed under the U.S. Supreme Court's decision, which he said did not strike down the penalty itself, but "selective executions" which could be imposed at the discretion of judges or juries.

He pointed out that this would allow California to impose a mandatory death penalty for the same crimes for which it was previously mandatory—mainly the murder of guards by prisoners serving a life sentence. Others, he noted, included treason, perjury causing the death of an innocent person, and causing death by trainwreck. Skyjacking could be considered as an addition to the list, he said.

No matter what happens in November, he stressed, the death penalty could not be reapplied to those on California's death row who were spared by the state Supreme Court's decision.

Motorbike Theft Charge Dropped

A 19-year-old Petaluman, charged with stealing a motorcycle and concealing a stolen auto engine, admitted one count in Marin Municipal Court yesterday and the other was dropped.

Craig Dewitt Smith pleaded guilty to having the engine on condition he be sentenced to no more than 30 days in jail.

The bargain was worked out by his attorney and the district attorney, but must be ratified by the superior court judge who sentences Smith on July 17.

He was arrested May 31 by the California Highway Patrol and San Rafael police. Authorities had received a tip he had the stolen property.

Dog License Deadline Set

Aug. 31 is the last day that Marin dog owners can renew current dog licenses or purchase new ones.

Licenses are available at any city hall, the Humane Society of Marin, or at the tax collector's office at the civic center.

Licenses purchased after the deadline will cost an additional $3. Fines of up to $32 may be levied if a dog is found roaming unattended without a license.

Rezoning Of Boulevard Parcel Backed

The San Anselmo Planning Commission last night recommended rezoning of a 33,000-square-foot parcel at 1310-1340 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from neighborhood apartment district to single-family residential.

The action, pending city council approval, prevents owner Marius Cordone from building an apartment complex on the property, according to Thelma Foster, commission secretary.

Cordine had proposed 22-units for the parcel, she said.

"The commission felt that the new zoning would afford stricter control and better design for any development there," she said.

The San Anselmo Planning Commission also:

PARCEL MAP — Recommended to the city council a parcel map ordinance which amends the city's subdivision ordinance.

LOT SPLIT — Granted Alma R. Wiederhoeft's application for a two-lot subdivision at Butterfield Road and Baytree Lane on the condition that she dedicate a small strip of land on Baytree Lane to the city, patch chuck holes along the roadway, underground utilities and cut her acre parcel into two equal lots.

VARIANCE — Referred a request for an off-street parking variance back to applicant Robert Furste Jr. Furste wants to convert a garage at his home at 3 Agatha Court to a recreational room.

HOUSING — Decided to hold a joint meeting with the citizens housing element committee to prepare a housing element for the city's general plan on July 10 at 8 p.m. in city hall.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to July 10.

Vacancy On Petaluma Board Filled

The Petaluma Board of Education last night appointed William S. Morrisey of Rohnert Park to fill a vacancy on the board.

Morrissey will succeed Sol Fishman, whose term was to have run through June 30, 1973. Fishman has retired from the board effective Friday.

The board of education met in closed session last night to consider a total of 11 candidates for the seat. Supt. Lesly H. Meyer declined today to name the 10 unsuccessful applicants.

Morrissey lives at 504 Anson Avenue with his wife and four children. He is employed with the Del Monte Corp. in San Francisco.

The new appointee has served on the John Reed School Parent-Teachers Association, the Northern Advisory Committee to the Petaluma Board of Education, and the Citizens Advisory Committee to the Cotati School District Board.

Meyer said Morrisey will be sworn in at the board's July 11 meeting.

opening game. Fischer, who did not arrive in Reykjavik until early today, did not attend the meeting. He stayed in his hotel room to sleep to prepare for the game.

Dr. Max Euwe, president of FIDE, said after Spassky's walkout that he was pessimistic the match would be held.

"The situation is critical. I don't know if the match will be played at all. I am very pessimistic," he said.

Spassky's statement, in Russian, was turned in as a formal protest to Fischer's two-day delay of the tournament.

"The public opinion in the USSR and I, personally, are (sic) indignant over Fischer's conduct. Under all human notions, he discredited himself completely," Spassky said.

"By this he jeopardized his moral right to play in the match for the world chess crown. Fischer must bear the just punishment before there is a hope of holding the match. Only after this can I return to the question about the possibility of holding the match," Spassky said.

Spassky has been waiting in Iceland one week preparing for the match.

Only Spassky attended the meeting to determine who would get the first move in the opening game.

Fischer stayed in his hotel room to sleep and sent his second, the Rev. William Lombardi, and two attorneys, Paul Marshall and Andrew Davis.

Spassky turned over his protest and walked out.

Lothar Schmid, the official arbiter of the match, said he would need a translation of the Soviet protest before he could act upon it.

"What happened was that Spassky lodged a protest against the fact that Fischer did not arrive in time Sunday and he walked out of the meeting," Euwe said.

Fischer's delaying tactics revolved around money. The organizers had put up $125,000 for the match, which has gained more world interest than any chess encounter in history. About 60 per cent was to go to the winner, with the loser taking the rest.

British millionaire James D. Slater came to the rescue Monday by offering to double the purse. He said he was putting up the additional $125,000 from his own pocket because he loved chess and wanted the match played.

The 24-game series starting today is to be played on alternate days, with the extra days allowed to finish incomplete games. A win counts as one point, a tie a half-point for each. As champion, Spassky needs only 12 points to retain his title, while as challenger, Fischer needs 12 1-2 points to win.

The Soviet chess federation condemned Fischer for "blackmail" and said his actions "merit his unconditional disqualification" from play.

Fischer, who balked earlier in the year over a selection of sites for the world championship, postponed his departure for Iceland four times and finally threatened to stay away from the championship altogether unless his demands for more prize money were met.

The Iceland Chess Federation refused and FIDE threatened to disqualify the American as challenger to Spassky's world title.

Hitchhiker Robs, Attacks Woman

A 31-year-old Mill Valley woman told sheriff's deputies she was robbed and raped today by a hitchhiker to whom she gave a ride to Marin City.

Deputies said the woman told them she picked up the man in Mill Valley at about 5:15 a.m. and proceeded to the Marin City interchange, where he grabbed her purse containing $3 and fled.

She gave chase, officers uaid, but soon found herself confronted by two other men who along with the hitchhiker forced her back into the auto.

She was then ordered by the hitchhiker to drive to a fire road above Marin City where she was beaten and raped, she told officers.

Girl Treated For Injuries

A 10-year-old San Rafael girl was treated at Marin General Hospital yesterday for injuries suffered when her bicycle collided with an auto in Novato.

A hospital spokesman said Susan Payne, daughter of Malcolm T. Payne Jr. of 92 Rollingwood Drive, was treated for back injuries.

Police said she was crossing Ignacio Boulevard near Pacheco Plaza at about 1:30 p.m. when she collided with an auto driven by Gregory Huss, 18, of 27 Regina Way, Terra Linda.

Woman's Career Aids School Effort

By MARION BELL WILHELM
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — When Edith Starrett, the bright-eyed daughter of two dedicated teachers, yearned to become an electrical engineer, she was advised not to try for a "man's career."

Her second choice was law. Again she was counseled out of a profession that would relegate a young woman to "back office."

So Edith Starrett grew up to become a teacher, as was advisable for a woman looking for regular employment in the 1930's. Today she is one of the most powerful spokesmen for American education in the U.S. Congress.

After 18 years on the House Education and Labor Committee, Rep. Edith Starrett Green (D) of Oregon says philosophically: "As it turned out, the career that was chosen for me has been invaluable to my work in Congress, and I suppose it even makes me a little impatient with those of my colleagues who have never taught school."

As the chairman of the Special Subcommittee on Education, Mrs. Green keeps her eye on trends and changes throughout the 50 states and the District of Columbia. She has sponsored major legislation to help rescue the nation's schools from the gathering storms of "a social hurricane."

All over the United States, she notes, school tax levies and bond issues are being defeated. Property taxes are high and uneven. Too often, she says, those making school policy are untrained in educational and professional skills.

"People seem to be losing confidence in the public schools," she observed in a recent interview. "I fear the day may be coming when we just won't have an educated citizenry. Already, we can see some evidence of this in some of our big cities."

Representative Green's goal is to see the federal government eventually take over 35 per cent of all educational costs from kindergarten through college. This would help equalize education for all Americans, she believes, while maintaining the quality of their best schools. She calls the coming changes in the financing of education "revolutionary."

However, the trend toward national financing contains some pitfalls, she cautions.

In a number of states, she points out, suits have been brought by citizens questioning the equality of education in school districts with widely divergent tax revenues. If the local property tax is abandoned for some kind of statewide tax, parents in states such as Mississippi or Alabama might also bring suits claiming inequality with states such as Connecticut. National equalization, though beneficial in some ways, could be disastrous, in Mrs. Green's opinion, "if we settle for mediocrity."

"I introduced a bill last year in which I proposed that the federal government by the year 1976 would contribute 25 per cent of the total cost of education in the average district," she says, "and this session I am introducing a bill that would provide one-third of the cost. At present, we are contributing 7 or 8 per cent.

"But I am not persuaded that money alone is going to buy quality. Here in the District of Columbia, for example, our schools are decaying before our eyes. And yet they have the higest per capita expenditure for education of any city of similar size in the nation."

Nor does Mrs. Green think that busing is the way to achieve the best education. She says: "I think a careful reading of the evidence shows that a child's education and his ability to be educated depend more upon the environment in which he lives than on the six hours a day in which he is transported to a school outside his neighborhood. I think that the task is much greater than we have assumed. We're going to have to change homes, and we're going to have to change neighborhoods."

Any attempt to place the major responsibility for social reform on the schools alone is doomed to failure, she asserts.

"It may be that a youngster who is attending a very poor school and is bused has an opportunity for a high quality of education," she adds, "but I think that, overall, the reverse is accomplished. I had lunch with some schoolboard members in Los Angeles, for example, a year and a half ago. This last year they had to cut out $50 million in programs and services for children in the Los Angeles schools because they didn't have enough money.

"Then a state court came along and said, 'You're going to have to desegregate.' The superintendent's office told me last November that for the first year their estimate on the cost of buying buses and hiring drivers will be $42 million.

Taxes Stay Same Under New Budget

The Rohnert Park City Council last night received a proposed budget of $1,176,647 for fiscal 1972-73 with no change in the tax rate.

The budget, submitted by City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan, is an increase of $357,349 over the 1971-72 budget of $819,298. He said the city tax rate of $1.69 per $100 assessed valuation need not be increased since assessed valuation is expected to increase by 25 per cent to nearly $12 million.

The budget reflects an additional $9,200 to hire a part-time planner and $16,380 to hire dispatchers for the police and fire departments. It also includes funds to hire a part-time animal control officer and money to increase pay for volunteer firemen from $5 to $10 per month.

Also included is $26,235 toward construction of the new city office building which will be completed late next month.

A significant increase in the parks and recreation department includes $184,050 for development of two new neighborhood parks in El Colegio and Holiday Park subdivisions.

The budget by department (with last year's figures in parenthesis) includes: general government, $281,300 ($159,365); public safety, $195,314 ($173,911); public works, $244,790 ($233,760); cultural arts commission, $1,600 ($2,550); parks and recreation, $283,448 ($103,797); golf course, $1,160,647 ($819,298).

The first budget work session is scheduled for next Tuesday.

The Rohnert Park City Council also:

HOLIDAY PARK — Rezoned about 70 acres south of East Cotati Avenue known as Holiday Park from agricultural to single-family, thereby allowing up to 270 homes on the site.

GOLF EMPLOYEES — Brought up to five full-time city golf course employees into the city retirement system.

SEWER STUDY — Approved contributing 25 per cent of the $36,000 price tag for a sewage study of the area that would find ways to keep treated sewage out of the Russian River.

CONSENT CALENDAR — Authorized City Mgr. Peter M. Callinan to set up a consent calendar of uncontroversial items that could be approved on one motion.

SCHOOL MEETING — Scheduled 7:30 p.m. July 12 to meet with the Cotati City Council and Cotati and Petaluma school officials to discuss the effect of development on schools.

Population Planning Goal Is Set

Novato Planning Commission members agreed last night that it was "a lot more reasonable" to plan for a population of 90,000 by 1990, Commission Chairman John Schoonover reported today.

The commission has been considering revision of the Novato area general plan for a potential total of 70,000 population. "We're practically there now, if you take the approved units into consideration," Schoonover said.

Planning for 90,000 people by 1990 would allow up to 16,000 additional homes in 18 years. A 70,000 population would mean 500 homes per year — less than the present building rate in Novato, commissioners pointed out.

Schoonover said the commission also reviewed the county's agricultural preserve map, and generally agreed with it except for one parcel north of Novato, now zoned for mobile home development. The commission believed it should be rezoned to one unit per 60 acres, Schoonover said.

The commission discussed but reached no conclusion on a suggestion to move the southern boundary of the Novato general plan area south of St. Vincent's Hill, to include Marinwood. Commissioner Gail Wilhelm noted that San Rafael's sphere of influence is "creeping" northward toward Novato, Schoonover said.

Driver Breaks Leg In Accident

A Forest Knolls man was hospitalized after a one-car accident on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at 9:30 p.m. yesterday, the California Highway Patrol reported today.

Vere Henry Peckham, 68, of San Geronimo, had a broken right leg, cut knee and cut hands and face, but was in good condition today, Marin General Hospital authorities said.

His car was demolished when it struck a power pole while Peckham was westbound near the entrance to San Geronimo Valley Stables.

Break-In Fails

A would-be burglar failed in his efforts to break into the office of Mount Olivet Cemetery across from the Civic Center Friday, but did $50 to $75 damage to the structure as he tried, sheriff's deputies reported today.

Kids Get Chance To Meet Nature

By CLIVE LAWRANCE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — Sparks of the sun danced in Joe Tobin's ginger beard, enlivening further an already lively face. He spread his hands as if holding a basketball and said, "I want to show the kids that the Hudson River is worth saving; there's so much life left in the Hudson!"

We were sitting on the front steps of Wave Hill Center for Environmental Studies, situated on the banks of the Hudson River in the Bronx. In front of us stretched green lawns, blossoms, flaming pink azaleas and large, thickly foliaged trees. The sun fell through in bright shafts.

Tobin heads the nature-studies program and the water-resources program at Wave Hill. Last month he took some 40 inner-city children onto the Hudson in the sloop "Clearwater," made famous some two years ago by river concerts given by folk singer Pete Seeger.

Among other things, they visited Piermont Marsh, the last remaining marsh in the lower section of the river. They collected many kinds of water life, including plankton, which they examined under microscopes.

"We put out a drift net and caught blueback herring, striped bass, white perch and carp," continued Tobin.

Although the Hudson still teems with life, Mr. Tobin, like many others, is concerned for its future.

In addition to the river, Mr. Tobin trieu to show inner-city children what the earth has to offer, both above and below.

I walked through one of the trails with K. C. Gust, who heads Wave Hill's special projects, and Harvey Spinoky, one of Mrs. Tobin's assistants.

"We are approaching the digging area," said Mr. Spinoky as children's voices drifted through the trees.

"Some kids," Mr. Spinoky went on, "have never put their hands in the ground; they have never touched a worm."

Wave Hill also teaches inner-city people how to bring nature into the city through cultivation of house plants and window boxes. They hold air-pollution workshops and special projects such as seminars and film festivals. Two years ago their Earth Day drew 900 inner-city children.

A recent all-day seminar on the Hudson River was attended by 300 high-school students and was climaxed by a concert by Mr. Seeger. He sang many anti-pollution songs. Ecology, and particularly the Hudson River, has long been his concern.

There are two large houses on the grounds, Wave Hill and Blyndor. Wave Hill, a designated New York City landmark was built in 1843-44 and among its residents were Mark Twain and Arturo Toscanini. In 1960, the estate was given to the city by the Perkins and Freedman families.

But it was not until 1968, under the inspiration of Richard Madigan, who still heads the center, that Wave Hill became a place for environmental education. The ground and buildings are kept up by the city, but all the programs are funded by various foundations.

As a result of the broad facilities offered by Wave Hill it was recently designated a National Environmental Education landmark by the United States Dpartment of the Interior — one of only 11 in the country.

Radical Shifts In Drug Traffic

LUCIA MOUAT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — Radial shifts in the traffic pattern of international narcotics are in the making.

That is the widespread assumption here as United States officials try to sleuth them out in advance and determine how best to attack them.

For years an estimated four-fifths of the heroin supply getting to this country's one-half million addicts originated in Turkish poppy fields. The pattern, well defined and largely uninterrupted, was for the opium to be processed in Turkey into morphine base. Then it was shipped overland to West Germany or, more commonly, it left by sea in Turkish vessels and was dumped overboard in waterproof containers at prearranged points near Marseille, France, for pickup and further refinement into heroin.

A combination of factors is forcing a change.

A Turkish ban on opium production is to go into effect after next autumn's crop is harvested.

France, which has an estimated 20,000 heroin addicts of its own in the Paris and Marseille areas, recently has begun to tackle the international drug problem with new vigor. In addition to quadrupling the number of drug enforcement officials on its payroll in the last three years, France has chalked up some significant narcotics seizures in recent months. Two processing laboratories were uncovered, and French authorities stand responsible for the largest seizure on record — 937 pounds of heroin aboard a Florida-bound fishing traveler.

Those fighting the global narcotics war suspect other areas such as South Asia and Southeast Asia, where poppies still bloom abundantly, may well be turned to by illicit traffickers to fill the gap.

Estimates are that Southeast Asia is responsible for more than half of the 1,300 metric tons of illicit opium produced each year around the world.

Although there have been crackdowns in parts of the so-called "golden triangle" growing area covering northern Burma, Thailand, and Laos, many of the most productive areas are not firmly under the control of the central governments. Also, awareness of the problem as an international one has been slow in coming, and the presence of so many American servicemen near the market remains a strong temptation for enterprising merchandisers.

Overseas Chinese are thought by Washington authorities to be the primary group in charge of Southeast Asia's narcotics traffic. U.S. intelligence reports show certain ethnic Chinese elements in the U.S., sharing family and cultural ties, have geared up an operation to take advantage of the availability of heroin in Southeast Asia.

Although the great bulk of opium produced in that corner of the world also has been consumed there — primarily in opium-smoking rather than heroin taking — more and more has been moving out of the area recently.

"The probablility that French traffikers will move to Southeast Asia is quite good," John E. Ingersoll, director of the Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this week. "There is still a heavy French influence in Indo-China, and I'm not naive enough to believe that all connections . . . have been broken."

One hope is that as the supply line is stretched, it will become more vulnerable. U.S. officials such as Ingersoll insist that international cooperation in the narcotics fight has never been better and emphasizes that that in itself is a major accomplishment. In the past when the problem was raised with other governments, U.S. authorities were told, "It's an American problem — if you didn't have the addicts . . ."

The refrain has changed considerably over the past year or two. France is usually cited as the stellar example of a nation persuaded the problem is its own as well as Washington's.

It was only last November that Laos took the first step toward declaring opium production and processing illegal.

The hope in Washington is that Afghanistan and Pakistan, which currently provide Iran with the bulk of it's opium supply and could become potential elements in a new traffic pattern as Turkish and French controls increase, also will firmly realize a crackdown is desirable and possible.

Washington long has urged a multipronged attack covering everything from treatment and education to supply and demand. However, its priorities recently have undergone a slight shift.

For the short term, the government has decided to put its emphasis on intelligence gathering and strong enforcement, with the elimination of illicit supplies such as Turkey's ban on opium production and development of crop substitutes edging into a slightly lower position.

They Staked Their All Upon A Dream

With one exception, they were men of property. Only Sam Adams, the firebrand leader of the Sons of Liberty, had only his life to lose.

Yet, in a sense, they were all anti-establishment — the 56 members of the Continental Congress who stepped forward to put their signatures to the ringing document of independence which Thomas Jefferson and his committee presented 196 years ago today. For all were so dissatisfied with the status quo that they were willing to break the ties of blood and long allegiance in the name of freedom.

Most of them were young, in their 20s and 30s. But a handful were old men — men who had spent a lifetime as loyal subjects of the British crown.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN of the Pennsylvania delegation was the oldest. He had already reached the allotted "three score years and 10." Not only that, but he had received honors and emoluments from the British government, serving as postmaster general for the American colonies.

The pulse of freedom throbbed as strongly in Franklin's breast as it did in that of 26-year-old Edward Rutledge of South Carolina, youngest of the 56. But coupled with it was the wisdom of age.

After scrawling his name so big that "His Majesty can read it without his spectacles" as a gesture of defiance, John Hancock, 39-year-old Massachusetts merchant and president of the congress, declared: "There must be no pulling different ways; we must all hang together."

And Franklin, standing by, rejoined: "Yes, we must all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately."

IT WAS NO idle jest. Every one of the 56 knew that by signing the document, he put his property, his life, and the lives of his family in dire jeopardy. There could be no turning back, no anonymity, no plea for amnesty.

For the document was a Declaration of Independence.

"We hold these Truths to be self-evident," it read, "that all Men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness — That to secure these Rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just Powers from the Consent of the Governed . . ."

They signed, and defied the lightning.

Some of them died for it. Others lost all that they had toiled and schemed to amass.

BUT THEY HAD a dream: a dream of a new kind of government, in which their should be no crown and subject, no lord and vassal; in which each man should stand on his own, and each should have a say as to who was chosen to govern, what kinds of laws were passed, and what taxes levied.

It was an astonishing dream. There had never been anything quite like it in the world. It was so inspiring that it gave birth to a new nation, unlike any nation then on earth. And to support it, those signers, as the document read, "with firm Reliance on the Protection of divine Providence . . . mutually pledge(d) to each other our lives, our Fortunes, and our sacred Honor."

A glorious dream! And if it lives less robustly 196 years later, it may be because we are not willing, like those 56, to stake our all on its survival.

"Just a moment, MISTER Jefferson! About this 'all MEN are created equal' bit . . ."

Board Candidate Handy With Advice

Last Monday night the Sausalito School Board ran into one of the seemingly endless legal problems which face a body of its kind —particularly now, in this period of legislatively imposed changes in school finance and organization.

The board discussed hiring an attorney.

A lawyer in the audience raised his hand and gave them the necessary informed advice, on the spot.

He was Douglas Martin, candidate for a seat on the board in the July 18 special election.

Little Driver Courtesy On Golden Gate Bridge

I am wondering if other people have the same trouble I do. When coming north approaching the Golden Gate Bridge, there are at least six lanes and possibly one other which leads through the gates, and then narrow down to three lanes. (I'm speaking of mid-afternoon.)

In similar situations of lanes narrowing, cars are courteously allowed ahead of others and there is no problem. But on the Golden Gate Bridge apparently everyone has the right-of-way. Or so he thinks. There is little courtesy exhibited at all.

No matter which lane I head for, nearest the gate through which I just passed, I seem to be in someone else's way, and I'm made aware of it by their horn. I'm proceeding as carefully as I can — my car has to go somewhere — or perhaps I should just disappear so as not to inconvenience others.

Is there perhaps some foolproof way of entering one of the three lanes without getting in front of another car? I'd really like to know.

Women's Libbers Making Gains Toward Goal of Equal Pay

A few showoffs and extremists have exposed the women's liberation movement to ridicule. But there's evidence the movement is making progress toward one unquestionably legitimate goal.

That goal is equalization of pay for women who do the same work as men.

For as long as anyone can remember, it has been customary in many American business and industrial firms to pay women lower salaries than men, even when they are performing identical jobs. The sex differential often has been as much as 50 per cent.

Now there's a federal law — the Equal Pay Act —which requires that men and women performing substantially the same work in the same establishment must receive the same pay.

THE LABOR DEPARTMENT is charged with enforcing this law, and it seems bent on doing a vigorous job of it. Recently, it hauled Sears Roebuck into court on charges of paying women sales clerks and department managers less than men in the same jobs. This was a test case involving a Sears store at Owensboro, Ky.

The suit was settled when Sears agreed to pay $50,282 in back wages to 14 women employes of the store. It also raised their wages immediately to the same level as their male counterparts. . .

Much more important, however, was a promise by Sears to train a special team of auditors to make regular checks of all 892 Sears retail stores in the United States to make sure they're complying with the Equal Pay Act.

That is what the Labor Department was after — teaching the nation's largest retail store chain that it would be very costly, in back wages, to allow any of its branches to violate the Equal Pay Act.

MEANWHILE the Manpower Administration of the Labor Department is conducting the largest survey ever undertaken of working women. It will involve depth interviews with more than 10,000 women —a national sample several times as large as professional pollsters use in forecasting elections.

Although it will be a year or more before all the results are in and tabulated, the Manpower Administration says it can already draw a few general conclusions about women at work.

The first is that typing and shorthand skills —which some women libbers scorn as leading to "serf" jobs —actually are very valuable for women who seek business careers.

Training in typing and shorthand — readily available in most high schools or at business schools —often makes it possible for women to obtain the allimportant "entry jobs" from which they can rise on ability to higher paying white collar or managerial jobs.

EDUCATION IN GENERAL is a great asset to a woman looking for work. The survey indicates that women with 13 or more years of education earn on the average about twice as much as those with eight or less years of schooling.

The new Equal Pay Act does not stop a private employer from choosing a man over a woman for promotion when a highpaying job opens up —even though the woman may be as well or better qualified. That this kind of sex favoritism does take place is indicated by the survey's finding that only 8 per cent of the white women and 2 per cent of the black women currently employed in private industry hold professional or technical jobs.

By contrast, in government agencies which have strict policies of equal opportunity for both sexes, 43 per cent of the white women and 34 per cent of the black women hold professional or technical

McGovern Poses Tough Questions For Some Democrats In Congress

WASHINGTON — The all-but-certain fact of Sen. George McGovern as the Democratic nominee for President is slowly sinking into the consciousness of this political capital. He represents the greatest political uncertainty, with the possible exception of 1964 and the Goldwater nomination, in this century.

For the politician running for office, the immeasurable is intolerable. That is why the Democrats on Capitol Hill are buzzing at the moment like a hive of bees threatened with being turned out of their happy home.

Within a rather narrow range, Hubert Humphrey is a measurable commodity. He could not, in the interpretation of the realists, defeat President Nixon. But at the head of the ticket he would draw from 43 to 48 per cent of the vote.

McGOVERN COULD DROP to 35 per cent or he could win by the narrowest of margins, say 50 to 51 per cent. It is this range of uncertainty that harrows particularly each of the 254 Democrats running for re-election. They must try to calculate the McGovern effect in their individual districts. In moments of great pessimism, they see the loss of the tidy majority that for 40 years has been practically unbroken, with only four years at two separate times of Republican control.

In the deep South and even in the border states, Democrats long entrenched are not quite so concerned. In most instances, with seniority, they can ignore the national ticket and build on a personal organization that has grown with the years. Their grip on committees with prizes to hand out in defense and space contracts and even the old-fashioned pork barrel of rivers and harbors is a powerful lever.

The picture is different for members from marginal districts and for the first-termers. Les Aspin of Wisconsin is a case in point. He defeated a Republican incumbent in 1970 with a majority of 61 per cent, thanks in part to the pull of Sen. William Proxmire at the head of the statewide ticket. Now he must figure on a McGovern down-draft of "X" percentage in a state that has gone Republican in every election since 1952 with the Goldwater exception.

A more critical case is that of William R. Roy, who defeated a Republican incumbent in 1970 in, of all places, Topeka, Kan. Roy, a medical doctor, ran ahead of every Democrat in his part of the state. In his district Humphrey in 1968 got 39 per cent of the vote. A private poll recently showed McGovern with 38 per cent, which is a tolerable drop if Roy can galvanize the organization that put him in two years ago. He believes that if McGovern will edge away from some of his more radical positions, the going will not be too rough.

ALL THIS IS, of course, premature. McGovern won the primaries with a remarkable organization of enthusiastic young. They provided the zeal, the vigor and the confidence that the traditional candidates lacked.

Come September this same organization across the country can mean a lot not only for the national ticket but for Democrats at the state and district level. Good will from both sides — the zealous young and the skeptical locals — will be essential to erase the aleination that otherwise is likely to prevail.

McGovern's first test after Miami Beach, granted that conclave does not end in the kind of carnage making the nomination all but worthless, is how he puts his campaign together. He will need to draw on the most knowledgeable and dedicated workers regardless of ideology. This gentle, mild-mannered South Dakotan cannot be expected to jump out of the television tube and embrace the voters. More than any campaign in recent history it will rest on organization rather than the appeal of personality. There is a lot of talent that McGovern can draw on.

On the organization level, the parallel with the Nixon campaign, if it follows the pattern of 1968, is close. The President is no charismatic television performer. The reliance four years ago was on large-scale, intensive organization, with all the hoopla of flag-waving Nixonettes getting top billing over the candidate's speeches.

Governor Wins Battle To Limit Property Taxes

By EARL G. WATERS

Chalk up a signal victory for Governor Reagan. His firm stand for limitations on property taxes wired into any "tax relief" proposal has prevailed at last.

Whether the Legislature, after a deadlock on tax reform carried over from last year, will adopt a tax bill before its planned recess this month is still not a certainty. But Speaker Robert Moretti's accedence to the governor on this vital point brings fresh hope for some reform.

Moretti's tax package, running opposition to the governor's plan carried by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ventura, cleared the Assembly without the safeguards demanded by Reagan. Lagomarsino's bill contained the protections and was backed by the League of Cities. Aside from the issue of barriers on property tax increases, the two measures were not too dissimilar.

MORETTI'S SIMPLISTIC approach to the property tax problem had been to increase the homeowner's exemption. Previous experience has demonstrated this is no relief at all. Assessors merely raise the assessed valuations while other officials increase the tax rates. The result is that the exemptions are offset and become meaningless.

And anyone who thinks the panacea for property taxes is increased state and federal appropriations for support of local government need only look at the record to know it doesn't work without the safeguards.

State subventions to local government have increased tremendously in the past quarter century. Not only have the cities and counties and local districts, particularly the school districts, been on the receiving end of the growing state largesse during this period, but federal funds have come into the picture as an entirely new source of local revenue.

It is anticipated that President Nixon's "revenue sharing," approved by the House and now before the Senate, will provide even more windfalls along with the huge school financing bill which he has just signed into law.

BUT THE SCHOOLS have been getting federal money for some years. And while the $29.5 billion revenue sharing measure seems gigantic, the fact is that the federal government has been shelling out some $37 billion annually to local governments.

Despite all these new revenues, property taxes have continued to skyrocket. The weakness of the federal money is that it does not contain the safeguards for property owners for which Governor Reagan has been so insistent. Critics of the federal revenue sharing contend that such loose money lead to local government irresponsiblity.

By sticking to his guns, the governor has compelled recognition for the necessity to place property tax limits on any future subventions to local government. This is a major step toward property tax relief.

AN EDUCATOR'S VIEW

Colleges, Pursuing 'Relevance,' Carry Courses To New Extremes

By Dr. JOHN W. GILBAUGH
(Professor of Education, California State University, San Jose)

Almost every topic which attracts public attention becomes subject matter for a college course. If several faculty members become interested, the single course may become the springboard for an area of emphasis involving several new courses. Or, if still additional interest is demonstrated, a minor or even a degree major may evolve.

During the past decade virtually every college and university in the nation joined in bandwagon curriculum movements by establishing "studies" for any subject area suggested by students and faculty members. Nothing seemed to be too far out for public funding. In considering whether to approve new course proposals, the most significant questions asked by college authorities were: Is the course requested or demanded? How much militant muscle do the demanders possess? With timidity widely prevalent in high places on most campuses, it is not difficult to comprehend why so many "relevant" courses have become commonplace in college and university curricula.

IT WOULD TAKE too much space to enumerate all the new courses and/or programs, even in one large college or university, which mushroomed in response to demands of militant faculty members and students. The following are some representative examples: Black Studies, Brown Studies, Ethnic Studies, Asian-American Studies, Third World Studies, and American Indian Studies. Conspicuous by their absence, however, from college and university offerings are: Irish Studies, Polish Studies, German Studies, Swedish Studies, English Studies, French Studies, Italian Studies, and other studies emphasizing the national origins of all other ethnic groups who contributed to United States history.

Then, of course, the ecology movement has blossomed on most campuses during the past five years. Picture a group of college students engaged in serious discussion on the imminent catastrophe about to befall mankind through the pollution of the world's natural resources — especially air and water. Also, visualize two-thirds of the discussion participants adding to low-hanging clouds of tobacco exhaust in a smoke-filled classroom by earnestly smoking cigars, cigarettes and pipes —as they augur an early end to mankind through atmosphere poisoning.

NOW, A NEW curriculum bandwagon is starting to roll. The apex of absurdity will be reached next fall by the introduction of a program in Women's Studies at California State University, San Jose. According to the Campus Digest, a biweekly newsletter issued by the public relations arm of the university administration, "A program in Women's Studies that will offer courses in more than seven areas will open during the fall semester."

"Developed by an ad hoc committee of women from throughout the campus, the program will attempt to 'shed some light on a neglected academic area —women,'" explained Dr. Fauneil Rinn, professor of political science and chairone (the National Organization for Women designation for 'chairman') of the new program."

Of course, with programs in Women's Studies already here, can programs in Men's Studies be far behind?

Save Our Schools Committee Surprises Even Own Members

Petaluma's Save Our Schools Committee surprised many people — including some within the committee — when it managed to raise $27,000 to keep schools off double sessions and to keep Grant School open.

Although committee members were all spouting optimistic phrases during the drive, many will now admit they thought they were working for a lost cause. Petalumans are not so wealthy as Marinites on the average, and most cannot afford to be generous contributors no matter how worthy the cause.

MOST DONATIONS came from families with school-aged children in amounts ranging from $30 to $50. Ironically, however, it was three developers who put the drive over the top when it stagnated at $24,000. Donations of $1,000 each were received from Condiotti Enterprises, Young America, and Wesley Bailey Land Co.

The developers, no doubt, dislike seeing headlines about double sessions schools when they're trying to lure new home-buyers to Petaluma Many on the committee viewed the donations as self-defense.

Donations were especially hard to come by on Petaluma's Eastside. Since McDowell was the only Eastside school which would benefit from the drive, many parents were reluctant to contribute since their children attend Old Adobe District schools. They had endured double sessions for years in their schools and felt no need to dig into their pockets to help their Westside friends stay on single sessions.

SOME GRUMBLED bitterly that the Westsiders had done nothing to help them when they were in need. In fact, some Eastsiders were a little sorry to see the drive succeed, saying, "To bad, it would have been nice for them to see what we've been up against."

One wonders what will happen next year if plans for more state support for local school districts aren't accomplished. Surely the district can't depend year after year on fund drives.

Schools Supt. Lesly H. Meyer and his assistant, George W. Castleberry, are already taking good-natured kidding about the private fund drive with its endless cake sales and fund-raising events. A superintendent from a Marin school district kidded Castleberry last week: "How are things in Petaluma —the cupcake-financed district?"

Long-Secret Hellsberg Papers Disclose Predictions Of '76

WASHINGTON — I have just received the top-secret "Hellsberg papers" which contain the secret history of the American Revolution. The papers were found 20 miles outside of London in the wine cellar of the country home of a legendary historical figure named Sir Daniel Hellsberg.

Sir Daniel worked for the Lord Rand Corp. during the reign of George III but became disenchanted with the way the British were conducting the war with the colonies and resigned. He apparently took a copy of the Whitehall Papers with him and turned over the contents to the Times of London.

Here are excerpts from some of the Whitehall Papers:

REPORT TO LORD NORTH, prime minister, from Gen. Thomas Gage, 1774:

I am happy to inform you that all goes well here in Boston and despite discontent amongst the natives over taxes, I cannot foresee any difficulty in putting down a revolt. Kindly send me some advisers to train the Loyalists to defend themselves against the Rebels, who are preaching insurrection in the cities and villages.

P.S. Have blockaded the port of Boston which will make the Rebels sue for peace.

REPORT TO GEORGE III from Lord North, July 30, 1775:

Gage sends good news from the colonies. His troops have won critical Battle of Bunker Hill and the Rebels are in disarray. Gage believes things are going so well that you can safely announce that our boys will be home by Christmas.

Memorandum to George III from Lord Portsmouth, 1776:

General Howe reports that Rebel Gen. George Washington surprised our loyal mercenary Hessian troops at Trenton and took 1,000 prisoners. Suggest you go before Parliament and ask for a Bay of Delaware Resolution giving you authority to send in as many troops as possible to put down uprising. With added troop strength and Washington facing a terrible winter at Valley Forge next year, I can see the light at the end of the tunnel.

FROM MINISTRY of Defense to Lord North, 1777:

Our mathematicians have just concluded on the basis of their calculations, as well as enemy documents, that the Rebels cannot hold on much longer. They took heavy losses at Saratoga and army morale is at a low ebb. Desertions are running high and there is prostitution in their cities. By sending more troops we should be out of America by 1778.

From General Cornwallis to Lord North, 1780:

My search-and-destroy methods have been completely successful, and I can report that the entire 13 colonies have been pacified. In 12 months we can turn all the fighting over to the Loyalists and start withdrawing our forces. Although the French have been supplying the Rebels with equipment, the revolutionaries are still a ragtag army without discipline or initiative. They are no match for our highly trained Redcoats and our sophisticated British equipment. For the first time I have confidence we can do the job.

FROM LORD NORTH to George III, Dec. 12, 1781:

Just received word that General Cornwallis was caught with his breeches down at Yorktown.

Apparently Washington surprised him, and Cornwallis had no choice but to surrender his entire army on Oct. 19, 1781. This may put a crimp in our pacification plans.

Suggest we send a delegation to Paris to discuss peace. It must, of course, be an honorable peace.

If the Rebels refuse to make a peace treaty, then we have no choice but to bombard their cities and blockade their harbors until they agree to our terms. You must not go down in history as the first English king ever to have lost a war.

Special Education Bill Turned Down

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill allowing school districts to extend special education programs for expectant high school mothers to mothers of newborn babies has been turned down by the Assembly.

The measure by Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, D-San Jose, was rejected Monday on a 31-34 vote, 10 short of the necessary 41.

Over A Million Glutting California Park Areas

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Millions of recreation seekers are glutting California parks, campgrounds and public areas during the Fourth of July holiday.

Ray Chapman, spokesman for the State Department of Parks and recreation, said yesterday that between one and 1.25 million visitors were camped at state recreation areas.

Hundreds of thousands more were packed into national parks and forest campgrounds. Yosemite and Sequoia National Parks were turning away visitors.

Most were already filled by reservations, but a few slots remained open in the north coast areas and beaches south of Los Angeles.

"If there's any room at all for camping that's where it is," Chapman said of the north coast.

The hot July sun sent droves of people to lakes and reservoirs. Sites where water sports are available received the heaviest camping pressure.

Campers turned away were advised to talk to the ranger on duty, who will direct them to other locations, Chapman said.

Heaviest hit was Yosemie National Park, where officials said camping space could be found only in the extreme north end of the park as early as last Friday.

Jim Howell, information officer at Sequoia and Kings Canyon national parks, said a few campsites were still available in Kings Canyon but Sequoia was full by Friday night.

A steady stream of campers to Sequoia and Yosemite were turning back at the gates. Others cruised through the parks hoping a spot would open up.

"Traffic has been heavy," Howell said, "but it has been a quiet weekend with very few incidents."

Newly opened Castaic Reservoir in the Los Angeles area had light camper pressure. Nearly all fishermen reported limit catches.

Coastline Measure Clears Senate Panel

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Senate Finance Committee reversed itself today and approved on a narrow vote a coastline control measure denounced as a "corporate land grab" by conservationists.

Sen. Dennis Carpenter, R-New port Beach, said his measure was the "only viable vehicle" before the legislature that could be passed this session.

He called a coastline initiative on the November ballot a "horrendous misuse of the governmental process."

Carpenter's measure was revived and sent to the floor on a 7-6 vote. A week ago the same panel rejected the bill on a 6-7 tally.

The measure would create a 15-member state board to draft and implement a comprehensive land use plan for the entire coast from three miles offshore to three miles inland.

In contrast, the initiative would establish regional government agencies to restrict development of the coast. The initiative is patterned after a bill by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, which Carpenter said had virtually no chance of passing the Senate.

Under the Carpenter bill, each coastal county would develop its own set of standards for development of the coast within its jurisdiction and submit it to the state board that would adopt a standardized state plan.

Carpenter said he had "high hopes" of his bill passing the Senate but said it would encounter severe opposition in the Assembly.

A spokesman for the Sierra Club, John Zierold, said the Carpenter measure would mean "an end of police power for regional government."

Carpenter says he wants controls over the coast to be left with local government. Opponents argue local officials have botched up the job to date.

Faculty Pay Hike Clears Assembly

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The Assembly yesterday approved Republican-sponsored legislation to grant University of California state college faculties an extra 5.5 per cent pay raise.

The bill by Assemblyman E. Richard Barnes, R-San Diego, more than makes up for the 5 per cent pay raise the legislature authorized for the faculties but which Gov. Ronald Reagan vetoed from the budget.

The governor left in the budget a 7.5 per cent increase for the faculties who had not been granted a pay raise in three years.

Barnes, who said he expected Reagan to veto his bill, told the Assembly it would upgrade the salaries of college instructors to keep pace with the cost of living since 1969.

The bill went to the Senate on a 57-8 vote. Republicans cast all the "no" votes.

Assemblyman William Ketchum, R-Paso Robles, who usually supports Reagan, announced on the floor, "I'm more than willing to vote for this bill. I'm more than willing to vote for the override."

Another Republican, Assemblyman Jerry Lewis of Highland, told Republicans if they voted for the bill they should be prepared to vote to override the expected veto as well.

FUTURE ENTRANCE — In the creating of a freeway bypass, the face of a community is altered and in Novato's case, a new entranceway is being fashioned, an offramp at DeLong Avenue which will carry cars into the downtown area. The above view looking west on DeLong Avenue shows the way traffic will flow into the downtown area with the Novato Civic Center scheduled to develop just east of the offramp.

Pair Tells Of Pacific Crossing

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK (UPI) —Why in the world would a perfectly practical secretary from Epsom, England, set off with a male companion to row 8,000 miles across the Pacific?

Sylvia Cook answers, "Partly for the adventure. Partly because of John."

John is John Fairfax, 35, the Englishman who, two years earlier, rowed alone across the Atlantic in a 25-foot open boat called the Britannia.

Fairfax and Miss Cook finished their Pacific Ocean saga last April after 360 days at sea in Britannia II. They had rowed from San Francisco to the Great Barrier Reef resort of Hayman Island, 580 miles northeast of Brisbane, Australia.

During a visit to New York to talk with publishers about a book Fairfax is writing on the Pacific voyage, the couple talked of their dangerous venture which included riding out four massive storms —and one shark attack on Fairfax. All this, in a 35-foot fiberglass craft.

THE TWO said the journey had forged a respect and friendship but there was no romance. She said, "We're practical people." He said, "After all, if you're rowing you don't feel very romantic."

Fairfax and Miss Cook met when he was planning the Atlantic crossing in 1967 and ran an ad in the personals column of the London Times asking if anyone was interested in helping him in any way.

One answer came from Miss Cook who proffered help in her free time as a secretary. She sculled as a hobby.

They arranged to meet. In his book describing the first crossing, "Britannia: Rowing across the Atlantic" (Simon and Schuster), Fairfax wrote that at that point "she was the only bright light in my life."

(UPI Telephoto)

In the interview in New York, both said they were finished with rowing endurance tests.

Miss Cook, who's 33, said the next time she goes to sea it will be on an ocean liner. Fairfax, however, already is planning another adventure, a world tour sailing a 100-foot schooner (already designed) with a 10-woman crew selected for technical skills—oceanographer, doctor and photographer among them.

"I'M RECRUITING," said Fairfax. "I'd like them to be attractive women. I can't stand hags." Miss Cook said she would not sign on —"I've had my challenge. Once is enough."

What propels Fairfax to pit his skills against the sea? "Because, as they say, it's there," he answered. "I like life. Yes, it's tough. Here in New York there's toughness too, but a whole different kind."

Their supplies included four types of meals, sophisticated versions of some of the foods our astronauts have used —beef patties, pork chops, diced meat, steak, plus vegetables. They took tinned sardines and also ate fish they caught along the way.

Fresh water started with 90 gallons with each permitted one half gallon each day, used for drinking, cooking and washing. Water caught in rains supplemented the supply and they had distillation equipment aboard if needed.

They divided rowing chores, he doing 10 hours a day, she five, and electing the cool parts of the day and night to row.

A TWO-WAY transistor kept them in touch with the world, although it became receiving only toward the end of the voyage when the transmitter went on the blink. They heard news broadcasts that they were feared lost in a cyclone.

Fairfax summed up his feelings this way: "When we started, there was a war in Ireland and one in Vietnam. When we landed there still was the war in Ireland and in Vietnam."

Women Demand And Get Greater Role In Party Nominee Selection

I-J Special Report

NEW YORK — Women are demanding and receiving a greater role on the selection of their party's Presidential nominee than ever before.

"The average delegate used to be male, white, over 50, and making more than $18,000 a year," feminist Gloria Steinem told McCall's Magazine in an article.

In 1968, women made up only 13 per cent of the delegates at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, and the Republicans had just 17 per cent women delegates in Miami Beach.

This month's Democratic convention in Miami will have a different look. Women are taking a larger part on the powerful committees; Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D., N.Y. has campaigned seriously for the Democratic nomination and, with the ruling by the credentials committee last week, will have 12 of California's delegates plus those from other state primaries in her corner; and women are being counted on state delegations to more closely represent their more than 50 per centage of the population.

New rules — binding on the convention — say that the party's state delegations must show reasonable representations of women, young people, and minorities — and that the delegations may be challenged if they do not follow these guidelines. The Republican Party has also called for a more open representation, but their reforms will not be voted upon before their convention in August and will not be binding until 1976.

For months now, women's groups, primarily the National Women's Political Caucus, formed last July to increase the political power of women, have been monitoring delegate selections. "We don't want a woman there just because she's somebody's wife," says a member of the Caucus.

BECAUSE WOMEN represent more than half of the population, feminists have demanded that 50 per cent of the delegates at the conventions be women. That is not likely to happen, but the percentage is expected to be significantly higher than in past years — perhaps reaching 30 to 40 per cent.

Not all women believe in striving for even representation. Republican National Committee Co-Chairman Ann Armstrong says, "I don't think you need to say that delegates have to be 50 per cent women or 22½ per cent young. What women want is serious consideration for any and every role in politics and government."

One woman in the spotlight at the Democratic Convention in Washington is attorney Patricia Harris, acting chairman of the Credentials Committee. She was elected last October by the Democratic National Committee over Iowa Senator Harold Hughes after a heated party fight. Since then, her primary responsibilities have been to interpret the rules regarding delegate selections and to appoint officers to hear challenges. Other women Democrats to watch are Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm, who has been campaigning for the Presidency; Dorothy Bush, Secretary of the DNC since 1944, who will call the roll and keep the records of the convention; Mary Lou Burg, Vice-Chairman of the DNC, who will assist Chairman Lawrence O'Brien, and Harriet Cipriani, Director of Women's Activities.

AMONG THE important women at the Republican Convention will be RNC co-chairman Ann Armstrong; Rosemary Ginn, chairman of delegates and organization, the Republican reform commission; and Rita Hauser and Pat Hutar, who are the two top women in President Nixon's campaign organization.

Most women in high party positions agree that women at the conventions should not limit themselves to "women issues." Yet there is no doubt that women at the conventions will focus on such issues as comprehensive child care for all, ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment, equal pay for equal work, government appointments for women, and abortion reform.

Before the Democrats convene, the NWPC will hold a caucus for all women delegates in Miami. "We want the women at the convention to be aware of their common political interest. And we hope that as a result they will push for fair representation in credential fights, in platform decisions, and in floor debate," says Caucus Executive Director Doris Meissner. She adds that the group has made similar plans for the Republican Convention.

FOR THE FIRST time, day care will be available at the Democratic Convention for the delegates and alternates who take their children. There will also be special programs planned for women, including seminars that will deal with what women need to know to become a larger part of the political process, and a luncheon for women who have run for public office. An information bazaar will be open so that both men and women can learn about the latest techniques in campaigning.

In essence, what women want from the '72 conventions is an opportunity to participate in a meaningful way. How successful they are will be measured by the number and type of women delegates at the conventions, by the leadership roles women will have played, by what comes out of the platform committees, and, ultimately, by who the party nominees are.

But the drive won't end there. Throughout the campaign, women will continue to want to do more, in most instances, than pouring coffee and sealing envelopes.

Caution Expressed On Annual X-Rays

The main concern: the danger to health posed by too much radiation.

Use Mild Cleaners

Mirror-bright aluminum pots should be cleaned only with soaps or mild detergents; polishes and nylon pads usually will dull their finishes, says the Aluminum Association.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Duo Gives An Inside Look At Their View Of What Life Is

DEAR RAP:

You've had all kinds of "What is A's . . ." but not one on WHAT IS LIFE? So here's ours:

LIFE IS . . .

HAVING to get out of a warm bed to go to school.

LEAVING your homeowrk behind accidently and then getting yelled at or humiliated before the whole class.

TRYING to stay awake until the dismissal bell.

WALKING home barefoot with your friends and raiding the 'fridge.

TALKING for hours on the phone while you throw whatever's handy at your bratty brother who mimics you.

HELPING Mom fix supper (in spite of snacks, you're starved); joking around with Dad; watching your favorite TV programs — and finally remembering homework, over which you fall asleep.

LIFE is your nice, warm comfortable bed again.

IT'S being finally asked out by a boy for the first time.

CHEERING for the first football game of the season.

RIDING a mini-bike with three people.

CRYING over a sad movie; reading a good book; playing cards at midnight.

SNEAKING out of the house at 1 a.m. and getting caught. Swearing to yourself you'll never be so dumb again . . . but everybody has to try it once. Feeling sorry and not knowing quite how to say it to your folks.

LIFE is summer vacation; going swimming every day; a beautiful tan; a good figure; long hair that shines.

IT'S a flat tire on your bike.

YOUR first pajama party.

HAVING a new puppy.

A WHOLE closetful of new clothes 'cause you've outgrown last year's in certain places. (And that makes you proud.)

A REFRIGERATOR full of food, with a note on the door, "WEIGH YOURSELF FIRST!"

COMING home an hour late and getting grounded.

LIFE is music, shopping for records, going to the senior prom, getting your driver's license, denting a fender and wondering, "Should I tell Dad or just quietly disappear?"

LIFE is peace demonstrations; going on 30-mile walks to raise money for the poor; car washes for the Junior Class; getting involved!

IT'S setting off firecrackers on the Fourth of July.

GETTING creamed on Hallowe'en.

LAUGHING so hard you're crying; crying so hard you think you'll never laugh again . . . but you do.

LIFE is a broken leg and all those autographs on the cast.

SWIMMING after dark.

WINNING first place in a contest.

SLEEPING over at your best girlfriend's, talking (and eating) all night in spite of parent yells of "Knock it off now!"

MAKING up your own vocabulary.

FALLING in love . . . again.

DISCOVERING your little brother isn't a toad.

COMING home to a wonderful family.

LIFE is high, low and medium. It's not always a bowl of firecrackers, but it can be awfully exciting sometimes, mostly fun, and we're glad we're here to enjoy it. — MILLIE AND LAURIE

A 'Men-Only' Adjustment Class Slated

The Marin Jewish Community Center is sponsoring a "Divorce Adjustment Class for Men Only" beginning July 13 at 8 p.m. It is limited to divorced or separated men only and is designed to assist them to live positively in the present in their "single-again" state.

Thi class has been created to fill a vital unmet need evidenced in recent years in Marin County, according to Mel Krantzler who will lead sessions.

Over 5,000 men have been divorced in Marin in the last four years. Their problems are of equal intensity and concern as that of divorced women, he said.

Community services for divorced men have been minimal. The Marin Jewish Community Center is attempting to help fill this need by sponsoring this class, which is available to men of all denominations.

Krantzler is a California licensed family counselor and became a specialist in divorce after his 25-year marriage ended in divorce.

"This course will offer men an opportunity to share their ideas and concerns about being single again with other men who find themselves in a similar situation. The object of the course is to assist such men through the process of group discussion to enable them to view their present single state as an opportunity for personal growth, as a chance to enrich their lives, to learn better ways of relating, rather than as a period of self defeat," he said.

Men wishing to register for this course should call Barbara Keppelman at the center. The course is to be for 10 sessions, on Thursdays at 8 p.m.

A Guide For Men Published

A booklet, "The Men's Guide to Menstruation," is available free from Tassaway, Inc., 155 South Robertson Boulevard in Beverly Hills.

A company spokesman said the booklet's purpose is to promote better understanding of women. The introduction is written by Dr. David Reuben, author of "Everything You Always Wanted To Know About Sex, But Were Afraid To Ask."

It defines menstruation, notes some of the myths that have surrounded the subject, gives hints on understanding women before and during their periods, outlines effects on both men and women, offers tips on making life easier, describes how women cope with the flow — and ends with a list of the most commonly asked questions on the subject.

New Book Deals With The Alcoholic

A new book, "The Alcoholic in Your Life," has been written to offer intelligent guidance in dealing with the alcoholic to minimize the damage he inflicts on people around him and to help make him more accessible to treatment.

Author is Jo Coudert, managing editor of the International Journal of Group Psycho Therapy, who wrote the book after experiences with her alcoholic mother and two close friends.

EARLY AMERICAN and Colonial style furniture mixes well with contemporary designs. This well-rounded variety of mixed styling is livened up with a splash of 20th century design bright, print fabric.

INSIDE YOUR HOME

Be Bold, Mix The Traditional

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY
General Features Corp.

You may be hung up on the beauty of good-looking Early American furniture or reproductions. You may love the revival of patchwork stitchery and small collectibles, but you don't have to give in to a kind of fusty, dusty interior that reeks of the country boarding-house of your youth.

Much as I love browsing in the thrift shops looking for restoration items, I turn off the lackluster quality of much of that merchandise. Not everything that's old is good. And not everything that is good and old has been well cared for. So there seems to be a point at which we should stop in our search for bargains.

Let the young marrieds or about-to-be marrieds dig in for those good finds. They'll add some touch of ingenuity to them and perhaps discard them along the way. But for the young executive who still wants a slightly sophisticated home environment, there's another approach to furnishing with traditional designs.

PICK ALL the basic shapes and wood pieces in the period you admire. But when it comes to upholstered sofas, ottomans, lighting, floor covering and window treatments, switch to contemporary possessions. For example, if you have Early American tables or a secretary or hutch figure in your home, dress the companion pieces with bold-colored, contemporary fabrics. You might even find one that's a modern-day version of the patchwork quilt — but done in 1970's colors and scale.

If 18th-century English furnishings fit your lifestyle, find a blown-up floral print instead of tiny documentary type. Have you invested in Mediterranean-inspired pieces? Use an Oriental fretwork print in a polished cotton on the chairs and sofa. That's the way the Europeans accumulated their possessions. A walk through any of the palaces of yesterday proves that the one-style interior is peculiar to this century.

The living room illustrated today includes new pieces including sofas covered with that single bright print we suggested. Part of a new collection called Stone Mill, any of the pieces will make the basis for a well-rounded variety of mixed, not matched, possessions.

Sometimes The Singleton Lead Is The Best; Study This Hand

When do you lead a singleton? This kind of lead was quite generally condemned in the days of whist (the game from which contract bridge descended). Some writers went so far as to call it a "sneak lead." It can be dangerous in contract bridge also, but a singleton lead is sometimes clearly called for.

SAME BID

The bidding was much the same at both tables of a world championship match. West opened with one diamond, and South wound up as declarer at four hearts.

Differences in language and in bidding methods didn't affect the opening lead. In both cases West opened the singleton ten of spades.

The best time to lead a singleton is when you have raason to believe that you can get to your partner's hand fairly quickly and when you can prevent declarer from drawing your trumps immediately. If you can't get to partner's hand, he can't give you the ruff. If declarer can draw trumps immediately, you will be unable to ruff.

IDEAL TIME

In this hand both West players knew that it was an ideal time to lead a singleton. East's bid showed a high card or two, probably in diamonds but possibly elsewhere. West's ace of trumps would prevent declarer from drawing the trumps in too much of a hurry.

The play worked out as expected. Declarer won the first spade with tha ace and led a trump.

LEADS CLUB

West stepped up with the ace of trumps and led a club (since East could not have an entry in any other suit). East won a club trick and returned a spade for West to ruff.

West eventually had to get his ace of diamonds, defeating the contract. All a matter of rountine in a world championship, but in the average game West would have reason for the pride in picking the right defense.

RECYCLED ART — Even lowly tin cans have a second life when transformed into a piece of sculpture, as Richard Waters has done in a work from the art from recycled materials show at Dominican College.

Lon Nol Frees 161 Prisoners

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—President Lon Nol freed 161 political prisoners today and presided over the return to Cambodia of the remains of a national hero who died in a French island prison 29 years ago.

The newly inaugurated president on the second day of his inauguration ceremonies at the Chamcar Mon Palace announced he was freeing the prisoners, among them 10 women, a newspaper editor and at least one high school student.

A central Prison official said most of the prisoners had been jailed for collaborating with the enemy.

Idaho Extends 19-Year-Olds Right To Drink

BOISE, Idaho (UPI) — "Okay," said the bartender when Jackie Messer, 19, flashed her newly issued liquor identification card.

"It felt good," said Miss Messer, who along with the rest of Idaho's 19-year-olds now can drink legally.

They were given the right to purchase and drink liquor beginning Saturday under a bill passed by the legislature.

ART REVIEW

A Wide Range Of Recycled Works

By LAURA DEVENDORF

Recycling for the sake of the environment is relaticely new. At least it si when compared to recycling for the sake of art which has been going on as long as art itself.

The process in art has jist been camouflaged under a lot of different labels, the most recent of which is "art from found materials." This might be jink sculptire, weaving, collage or even printmaking as shown by a collection being exhibited through Monday in Alemany Library at Dominican College in San Rafael.

Most of the artists shown are from Marin and have been associated for sometime with this sort of creative reclamation project. Among them are weavers Ida Grae, Gayle Luchessa, Wendy Lilienthal and Ethel Montague, all of whom combine lush woven pieces with rusted metal, clay, feathers, driftwood, twigs or brush.

There are also pure junk sculptors such as Art Grant, who makes whimsical men and animals out of unlikely refugees from the scrap metal heap.

There is a case full of jewelry made from machine parts, a colony of pebble birds and a set of mugs constructed from metal pipe with one end squished shut and handled with big door latches.

Much of the work is funky and fun. But junk sculpture also can be thoughtful and brooding. Raymond Barnhart makes it so with a mysterious union of ancient wood, torn leather, fur, melted metal, hunks of charred wood, nails, mirrors, buttons and a wasp's nest stuffed with pearls.

In a second work he creates a serene triptych from used wood and arched boxes which hold a junk metal rearing horse, a bleached animal skull and the neck of a small violin. He forfeits his power with a cliche Pop art thing of doll parts, toys and bottle tops. But in the first two pieces, he creates as compelling an aura as any artist could, using more traditional media.

Mary Dekker is another mix and match junk collector, often combining discarded toys with wood and mirrors, placing them in a tall tower or deep shadow boxes and spraying them a unifying color.

Wood seems particularly attractive used alone in mosaics as in Mary Lou Stribling's driftwood tree and Robert Biancalana's intarsia. In Biancalana's work, a cross emerges subtly from weathered gray-tan chunks surrounding it.

Artists frequently use junk in collage and assemblage such as Alice Liff's "Hotel," which suggests its theme through an arrangement of old tintypes, book pages and such. And the second life artists give to discards is sometimes practical. Janet Clark turns a broken, rusty disc into a mirror and Richard Waters creates a musical intrument from metal rods inserted in a castoff enamel tub.

The Dominican exhibit does nicely in explaining recycling in art, suggesting where and how and why it is done. Some of it is pure nostalgia. Some of it is genuinely creative. And some of it is just fun. But all of it emphasizes the unique beauty that occurs with age, the thing which has attracted artists to recycling for so long a time.

Special Attractions Announced

The College of Marin Department of Theater Arts has scheduled three musical events in addition to its regular summer repertory theater season.

Denny Zeitlin and associates George Marsh and Mel Graves will perform Monday in a concert featuring electronic jazz and free-form music.

Pianist Robert Krupnick will present a program on Aug. 1 that will include works of Stravinsky, Brahms, Bach and a contemporary piece for piano and tape.

The final concert in the series on Aug. 8 will feature baritone Thomas Buckner in a program entitled "An Evening of Song and Improvisation."

All concerts start at 8 p.m. in the college Fine Arts Theater.

The College of Marin's regular repertory theater season will run from July 20 through Aug. 20. It will feature "Bierce Takes on the Railroad," by Philip Bosakowski, and Carol Roper's "You in Your Small Corner and I in Mine."

Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Error's" will round out the season.

Tickets and information about these events are available from the College of Marin Fine Arts Theater box office.

Pound Slumps To A New Low

LONDON (UPI)—The pound today slumped to $2.4135, a new low on foreign currency exchanges. Selling orders also hit the dollar in continental Europe pinning it to its official "floor" in some centers.

Today's 7.3 per cent devaluation of the pound from its former official price of $2.6057 boosted the spending power of American and other overseas visitors but it also chopped back the pound's purchasing power for Britons vacationing abroad.

Selling orders hitting sterling and the dollar obliged Swiss and West German national banks to prop up the dollar and to prevent the U.S. currency slipping below its agreed lowest official price or "floor." The pound is floating free from its official rates and thus gets no support from foreign government banks.

Campfire Blamed For 1,200-Acre Blaze

PORTERVILLE, Calif. (UPI) —An unattended campfire was blamed today for a 1,200-acre brush and timber fire in the wilderness of Sequoia National Forest.

Ranger Don Hanson said that whoever left the campfire in the rugged countryside could be liable for the entire cost of fighting the blaze, an amount that could top $250,000.

ALL FALL DOWN

Fourth of July holiday celebrants were dropping throughout Marin yesterday, but for varying reasons. Members of the Larkspur Fire Department (top), losers in a tug-of-war with the rival Corte Madera department, collapse in a heap in Corte Madera's town park — and get sprayed in the process. Meanwhile, the rounds at the "Grand Old Fourth" festival at the Marin Art and Garden Center in Ross proved too much for 4-year-old Susan Zelinsky (below). She slumped into the lap of her mother, Linda.

Terra Linda Annexation Talks Will Resume With San Rafael

The San Rafael City Council last night announced resumption of talks on possible annexation of Terra Linda to San Rafael.

The council agreed to meet with the Terra Linda Community Services District board on July 11 at 7:30 p.m. in city hall for an "exploratory session" on the possible merger of the two communities.

The meeting - reportedly arranged by Mayor C. Paul Bettini and Robert N. Bennett, chairman of the Terra Linda board - will mark the first time that the two governing bodies have conferred face to face on the matter.

Terra Linda voters rejected an annexation proposal in 1961 and merger talks have been fruitless ever since.

The reopening of annexation discussions comes on the heels of a Marin County Local Agency Formation Commission decision last week which may rob the district of substantial tax funds.

The commission said that only the owners of a 12-acre parcel along Highway 101, south of Lucas Valley Road - where Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. plans to build a $15 million computer center - can vote on whether the property can be annexed to San Rafael.

The Terra Linda Community Services District had argued that the choice parcel should remain in Terra Linda unless voters throughout the district approved of the annexation action.

(The insurance company has sought annexation to San Rafael primarily because of better fire protection.)

Bennett, reached at home by the Independent-Journal, said he had no comment about the July 11 merger meeting. Bettini was absent from last night's council meeting.

The San Rafael City Council Also:

COMMENDATION — Awarded Lt. Phillip D. Green and officer Harold E. Pennington plaques of commendation for risking their lives during a hand-to-hand struggle and gunfight with a San Rafael narcotics dealer on April 14. Green, shot in the buttocks during the gun battle which claimed the life of Donald Dean Oliver, was released from the hospital last Monday.

FIRE CODE — Adopted the 1971 edition of the Uniform Fire Code.

SIGN — Granted the appeal of Juan Ferrer for a sign painted on the wall of an office-warehouse at 58 Lovell Avenue. Council agreed that the sign "looked good" even though it was painted illegally on the east wall of the building.

GAS PUMP — Denied owner P. L. Friendshuh's request for a gas pump at the Short Stop Market, 141 Bellam Boulevard. The council ruled that if markets were permitted to install gasoline pumps, service stations would have a right to sell groceries.

CHAMBER — Heard Joseph J. Garbarino, chamber of commerce vice president, report that the chamber would have to curtail its services to the city if the group failed to get financial assistance. "We've just run out of money," he said. Staff was instructed to study the possibility of awarding the ailing agency a city grant.

BOND ELECTION — Took the following action to implement the city's open space bond issue election in September: employed the Oakland firm of Sturgis, Den-Dulk, Douglass and Anderson as bond counsel at a fee of $25,000, payable if bonds are sold; hired San Francisco's Hornblower and Weeks Co. as financial consultants for $6,000, payable if bonds are sold; requested the county clerk to perform election services, and formally called for the special district $2.25 million bond election.

PETITIONS — Accepted petitions signed by Lucas Valley homeowners who are forming an assessment district in order to buy open space areas. The owners of more than 70 per cent of Lucas Valley property have requested assessment district formation.

MORATORIUM — Directed the planning commission to begin public hearings concerning an eight-month extension of the city's four-month building ban on large undeveloped parcels, but set no date for the proceedings.

PARKING — Referred to the traffic committee Councilman Harry A. Barbier's request for a two-hour limited parking zone on Grand Avenue between Fourth Street and Fifth Avenue.

REDEVELOPMENT — Met for five minutes as the city's redevelopment agency and elected Planning Director Herbert G. Hotchner as assistant executive director of the agency, and deputy city clerk Renee Burdisso as the agency's assistant executive secretary.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 7:30 p.m. July 11.

Third Inmate Takes A Walk

An inmate electrician walked away from a work detail yesterday outside San Quentin Prison, bringing to three the number of such escapes in the last week.

Prison officials said Raymond Swanson, 29, was on hand for the 12:30 p.m. head count but disappeared sometime before 4 p.m.

He was serving time for robberies in San Francisco and Los Angeles counties and for escaping from the Deuel Vocational Institute at Tracy.

On Sunday, a convict working in a San Rafael service station under the work furlough program failed to return to prison.

Officials said Donald F. Jackson, 32, who was eligible for parole in October, was working nights at a gas station but failed to return to the prison by 2 a.m. He was serving a sentence for forgery.

Another inmate, William Holliman, 24, escaped last Monday from a house outside the prison security where he was spending the weekend with his family.

Mc Carthy 'Interferes,' Is Arrested

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Robert I. McCarthy, 51, former chief of the state Department of Motor Vehicles, was arrested today by the California Highway Patrol on a charge of interfering with an arrest.

McCarthy was a passenger in a car driven by Thomas Kiernan, 52, of San Francisco, patrol officers said. The officers stopped Kiernan's car southbound on Doyle Drive south of the Golden Gate Bridge at about 1 a.m. and arrested Kiernan on suspicion of drunken driving.

McCarthy, an attorney and brother of former state Sen. John McCarthy of San Rafael, attempted to interfere with the arrest, officers said. No other details were available. McCarthy gave his address as San Mateo.

McCarthy served as motor vehicles chief under former Gov. Edmund G. Brown from 1958 to 1961.

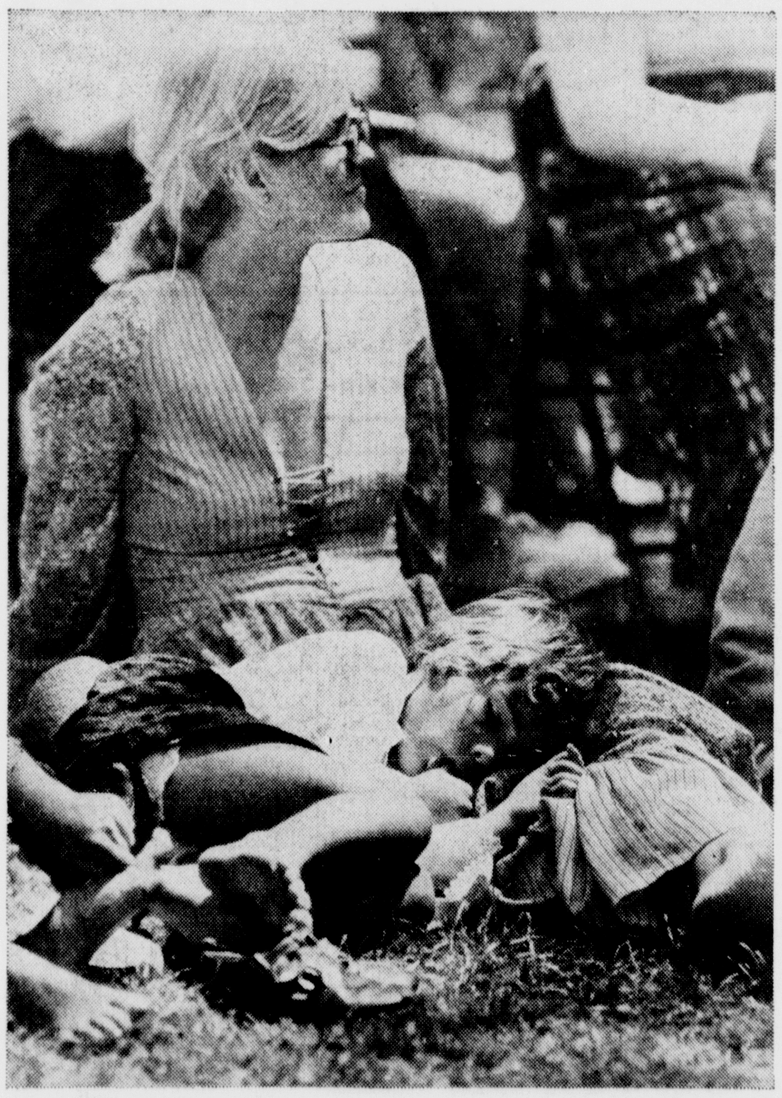
Both McCarthy and Kiernan posted bail at San Francisco City Prison.

Driver Is Taken Off Critical List

A Corte Madera man, removed from the critical list at Marin General Hospital, was reported in fair condition today from injuries sustained when his auto crashed at Dillon Beach on Sunday.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Lynn Kenyon, 28, of 139 Mariner Green Court, was traveling along Dillon Beach Road when his car skidded around a curve and overturned in a ditch.

He was treated for head injuries at Hillcrest Hospital in Petaluma and then transferred to Marin General.



Marin Income Above Average

Marin County residents enjoyed an average annual income $3,203 greater than the state-wide average family income of $10,732, according to 1970 figures released by the Bureau of the Census.

The county's average per capita income amounted to $4,831 and $13,735 per family.

Nine per cent of the county's 206,038 residents were foreign born, and 18 per cent had at least one foreign-born parent.

Among the county's 190,424 inhabitants in 1970 older than five years, 55,876 lived elsewhere in 1965.

Seventy eight per cent of men aged 16 and over, and 43 per cent of the women were employed in 1970. Seventy-one per cent were white collar workers, with the government employing 18 per cent of them.

Married women made up 38 per cent of the labor force; 23 per cent had children under six.

Marin County had 60,737 persons aged 3 to 34 years old enrolled in school. Among the 25-and-older population, 77 per cent of the men and 81 per cent of the women were high school graudates.

The Bureau of the Census this week also released statistics about housing conditions in Marin County at the time of the 1970 census.

In 1970, an average 2.9 persons lived in each of Marin's 70,891 housing units.

There was at least one television set in 63,711 of those housing units.

The census bureau also found 3,482 housing units with air conditioners; 48,747 units with washing machines; 41,948 with a clothes dryer, and 18,001 with a dishwasher.

Electricity was used for cooking in 40,672 units, natural gas in 25,298 households, and bottled, tank or LP gas in 1,318.

Some 1,115 living units lacked kitchens; and 1,229 had no bathrooms.

There were 1,670 units without a bedroom, 11,350 units with one, and 13,407 with four or more.

A total of 23,913 housing units were built in Marin County before 1949; 21,091 during the 1950's; 15,166 during 1960-64, and 10,400 within the five years preceding the April 1970 census.

Owners outnumbered renters in 1970 by nearly two-to-one. In Marin County, owners occupied 40,839 units, and renters 26,427. There were 3,304 vacant units at the time of the census, with 476 for sale and 1,113 for rent.

Innocent Plea To Burglary Charge

Richard James Giakovmis, 19, of Fairfax, pleaded innocent yesterday in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of burglary stemming from the theft of bucket seats from a car.

A preliminary hearing scheduled for July 25, two weeks after codefendant Vincent J. Holstein, 21, no known address, is to appear for a hearing on whether the same charge against him justifies a trial.

The pair was arrested Wednesday after a witness told police two men were removing the seats from a car belonging to Virginia Gillford of 437 Scenic Avenue, San Anselmo.

Driver Released From Hospital

Rich Lee Lechuga, 20, of Petaluma, was released yesterday from Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael following treatment for injuries suffered Saturday in a single-car accident.

According to the California Highway Patrol, Lechuga apparently fell asleep at the wheel of his auto on the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road.

Lechuga, of 136 Keokuk Street, was about two miles west of Wilson Hill Road when he ran off the north side of the road into a group of small trees.

Constitution In Peru Suspended

LIMA (UPI)—Peru's military govenment Monday night suspended constitutional guarantees and issued a state of emergency in the province of Puno. The announcement said the action was to allow the government to put down "extremist groups."

Press reports from Puno said leftist extremist students from the Altiplano technical university were demonstrating against the government.

Unconfirmed press dispatches report that two students and a woman were killed in disorders when the extremists attacked police stations. The city of Puno is about 400 miles southwest of Lima.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Declaration Of Independence— Five Signers Were Physicians

Five of the 56 signers of the Declaration of Independence were physicians. Dr. Josiah Bartlett of New Hampshire was the second person (John Hancock was the first) to sign the document. Dr. Bartlett was so devoted to the cause of freedom and so outspoken about his beliefs that the British singled out his home for destruction.

During the American Revolution, there were approximately 3,500 physicians in the colonies, but fewer than 50 had received an M.D. degree from the two existing medical schools in the country. The majority had been trained abroad, and it is conceivable that many had less schooling than they claimed. After all, there were no licensing boards and no one to approve or reject their diplomas or other credentials.

On the other hand, most of the physicians were educated, which could not be said of the majority of the colonists. As a result, it was natural for physicians to turn to politics and to take active roles in the revolution. They were needed to care for the troops.

DR. JOSEPH Warren (Harvard, 1759) was a celebrated orator. He was not a signer of the Delcaration, but was the man who sent Paul Revere on his ride through Lexington. Dr. Warren was bayoneted while attempting to rescue his dying borther in the front ranks at Bunker Hill.

Ten of the 31 physicians who fought in this battle were killed. Dr. Hugh Mercer (Virginia) was better known as Gen. Mercer becuase of his fame in the Indian Wars. His illustrious career was ended when he died as a result of wounds suffered at the Battle of Princeton.

BENJAMIN RUSH, Lyman Hall, and Oliver Wolcott were other physician signers.

Dr. David Bushnell, another physician of Revolutionary fame, built the first underwater vessel to blow up British ships. It was a barrel-like device that carried gunpowder to be attached to the target. It worked, but was not too successful.

EYE DISEASES

D. A. writes: Are glaucoma and cataracts related in any way?

REPLY

No, except that both conditions may lead to blindness unless treated. In glaucoma, the tension within the eyeball increases; and if this pressure is sustained, the delicate cells of the retina will be destroyed. Cataract is a clouding of the lens. Occasionally, glaucoma develops as a complication of cataract surgery.

• BEANLIKE LUMPS

B. E. writes: What causes beanlike lumps to appear in various parts of a child's neck?

REPLY

These are glands that enlarge when the child has an infection in the nose and throat, or a generalized disease such as measles, mononucleosis, or leukemia.

'BAD' TONSILS

A. E. writes: If a child has frequent attacks of tonsilitis, does this mean his tonsils are harboring an infection?

REPLY

Yes, but the tonsils should be examined before concluding that tonsilectomy is needed.

LAW IN ACTION

From the State Bar Of California

Some Views On Loitering

Walt Whitman wrote, "I loaf and invite my soul." In his day the famous poet was a kind of vagrant. The Supreme Court recently said that under some "vagrancy laws," Walt Whitman would have been jailed for lolling about.

In this case the Supreme Court struck down a city ordinance which punished "strolling around without any lawful purpose or object." The Florida law said that it was "unlawful to habitually loaf."

The law was too vague. If a retired person spends his afternoons walking in the sun, is he habitually loafing? No one person could tell when his conduct might be criminal. This encouraged arbitrary erratic arrests and convictions. Enforcement of the law is at the whim of the police. It would permit the rich to loaf, but not the poor.

Attempts to punish a person's status as a vagrant are generally invalid. For example a California law used to make it a crime to be a "common drunk." Another law tried to punish a person for being unemployed, or for loitering. Both are invalid.

If the loitering is combined with conduct, the law may be valid. For example, loitering about a public toilet for soliciting or engaging in lewd conduct is a valid law.

The Constitution guarantees the right to peaceful assembly. But an assembly to commit a disturbance, to block traffic, to conduct a fight or incite a riot would not be included.

Police may properly ask a person to identify himself if needful for public safety. In one case, the defendant was walking around a residential area at night. An officer stopped him, and found that he was looking for his friend "Mike" but could give no address. There had been recent reports of prowlers in the area.

So when the defendant refused to identify himself he was charged with failure to identify. His conviction was affirmed. This was not an indiscriminate request to identify. The officer had valid reasons, and public safety did demand identification.

Another recent case tried to prohibit hippies from sitting on the grass and loitering about. This was invalid. So was a law which tried to give shopping center owners the power to run off undesirable people who might be loitering. In both cases the laws were too vague.

(Note: California lawyers offer this column so you may know about our laws.)

Funds Asked For Suit On Tidelands

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A $166,000 appropriation for the state to pursue a lawsuit involving San Francisco Bay tidelands ownership is before the Assembly today after clearing a key committee hurdle.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, said the outcome of the suit between the state and Westbay Associates over 11,000 acres of South Bay tidelands probably will determine whether the federal South Bay Wildlife Refuge is ever completed.

Bagley, author of the appropriation bill, said the money is needed for the state to complete the case started by the attorney general in 1969.

He told the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, which approved the measure yesterday, the funds were cut from the state budget last month by the joint Senate-Assembly conference committee.

The state started the action in a Superior Court action in an attempt to establish public navigation and fishing rights over 800 acres of tidelands owned by Westbay Associates, located near San Francisco airport, Bagley said.

He explained the firm filed a countersuit four months ago bringing all 11,000 acres of its offshore holdings into the dispute. The outcome of the case will probably determine the status of another 40,000 acres of tidelands — mostly salt flats — at the extreme north and south ends of the bay, said Bagley, an attorney.

Youth Booked In Drug Probe

A 19-year-old Brisbane youth was arrested early today in Larkspur on suspicion of possessing restricted drugs.

Police said Paul Zalyvon Prince was arrested at about 1 a.m. today but had no details pending a report from the arresting officer.

Prince was booked into Marin County Jail with no bail set. He is scheduled to appear tomorrow in Marin Municipal Court.

Assembly Panel Votes To End Cabin Rentals

SACRAMENTO (AP) — An Assembly committee has voted to end "nine years of special privilege" by "well known and very prominent persons" who have been renting state cabins in Marin for $41.66 a month rent.

The 13 cabins are on their own practically inaccessible beach in Mount Tamalpais State Park. The occupants have been using them under a special interest bill passed in 1963. The authors of the bill are no longer in the legislature.

"Time has run out on this kind of special privilege," said Sen. Peter H. Behr, R-San Rafael to the Assembly Natural Resources and Conservation Committee Monday. Behr, author of a bill to repeal the rental agreements, said the occupants were mostly from San Francisco, with a few from Oakland.

The bill would give the California Department of Parks and Recreation the right to use the cabins "as it sees fit," Behr said.

Three Arrested In Child's Death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three young men were arrested early today in the slaying of a 4-year-old girl, termed by one policeman a "joy killing." The child was playing in her front yard when she was hit by a shotgun blast fired from a car.

The men were booked for investigation of murder in the apparently motiveless slaying of Joyce Ann Huff of Hawaiian Gardens on Sunday.

They were identified as Donald Paul Antel, 21, Michael Ramirez, 18, and Oscar Hernandez, 22, all from suburban Norwalk. None offered resistance, deputies said.

Gift For TV: Same Convention Location

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Democrats and the Republicans finally have given the television networks the gift they have been seeking for years —the same city for both national party conventions.

Conventions cost lots of money for everyone —the political parties and candidates, the cities and states involved, the print and broadcast media. But no one puts out as much as the networks, and no one was happier when the Republicans decided at the last minute to shift their 1972 convention from San Diego to Miami Beach.

The last time both conventions were in the same city was in 1952 in Chicago. But big time television still was new, and the multimillion-dollar coverage the broadcasters now lay on was in the future. So TV didn't realize the savings of a common site then that it will now.

By one estimate, the three major networks will spend up to $22 million on the conventions, easily the largest outlay of anyone involved in the two meetings. But they saved hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions, of dollars by not having to pack and ship tons of equipment and transport hundreds of employes from Florida to California.

For example, NBC alone shipped 24 trailers and several mobile broadcasting units to Miami Beach and will have 450 broadcasters, reporters, technicians and executives on hand. The people may go home between July 15 and Aug. 21, but the equipment can stay in place.

On a smaller scale, the common convention site is a savings for all the communications and news people, many of whom set up or lease transmission facilities at the convention cities every four years.

The next largest convention spenders are the political parties themselves. The Democrats estimate their expenses this year at $2 million, and the Republican figure probably will be in the same ballpark. Each of the candidates also make heavy outlays for communications, housing and transportation.

The city of Miami Beach, plus other interested government and private bodies, will spend an estimated $1.5 million on the two conventions. A breakdown includes $500,000 from the city and county for donated goods and services; $250,000 in cash to the parties from the Miami Beach Tourist Development Authority; $100,000 from the South Florida Hotel Association; $130,000 from a state finance committee set up by Gov. Reubin Askew for the conventions; and $565,000 in salaries and training costs, paid by the state, for 400 Florida highway patrolmen, game commission officers and beverage agents who will help the small Miami Beach police force.

Other costs not readily available include extra expenses of federal officials working on convention security and of Army troops being brought to nearby bases in case they are needed. Miami Beach hotels, restaurants and other businesses also will be laying out money, but they are expected to get it all back with profit from the thousands of delegates, newsmen, observers and hangers-on who will bring themselves and their money to the beach this summer.

Election To Fill Sato Post

TOKYO (UPI)—Conservative politicians assembled from all over the country today to elect a man to succeed retiring Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato.

Sato, 71, steps down after holding office for a record seven years and eight months.

Since the Conservative party holds a majority of seats in the 491-member house of representatives, the man who becomes LDP president also succeeds Sato as premier.

The candidates are Takeo Fukuda, finance minister; Kakuei Tanaka, minister of international trade and industry, and former foreign ministers Takeko Miki and Masayoshi Ohira.

Nude Swimming Comes To End

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Stanford University has upset 60 years of tradition by banning nude swimming in the men's pool.

Male students used to swim without trunks from noon to 2 p.m.

The practice came to an abrupt halt last week when three women invaded the pool during the two-hour period, disrobed and took a dip.

Chichester Undergoing A Checkup

PLYMOUTH, England (UPI) —Sir Francis Chichester underwent medical checkups today after two weeks of battling storms, illness and accident in the Atlantic. A member of Parliament asked how much rescuing the 70-year-old yachting hero cost the government.

Chichester, knighted for sailing round the world alone in 1967, dropped out of the Observer Transatlantic Singlehanded Race and reached home with Royal Navy help Sunday after running into gales, sickness and a collision with a French weather ship that snapped a mast on his yacht, Gipsy Moth V.

Suffering from anemia and arthritis, he had entered the race against doctor's orders.

His son Giles, 25, and three Royal Navy yachtsmen put aboard from the frigate Salisbury off the Bay of Biscay helped him sail the final leg back to Plymouth, from where the 3,000 mile race to Newport, R.I., began June 17.

Tovani's Itinerary For Millionth Kick

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Wherever you may be hiding in Marin County tomorrow, you will have a chance to see a man kicking footballs with his bare feet. Lucky you.

The man, of course, is one Gordon Tovani of San Rafael who has kicked footballs in some of the weirdest places imaginable. And he has laid out his plans leading to his one-millionth kick.

Starting at 8 a.m. tomorrow, Tovani will lead an auto caravan throughout Marin County, stopping 41 times along the way to kick a ball or two. When he gets to the 42nd stop, St. Anselm's School play yard in San Anselmo, he will kick No. 1,000,000 over the building, or through a window if he misses.

THE TIME, according to his carefully laid out itinerary, will be 5:15 p.m. The whole thing is "amazing . . . unbelievable . . . and maniacal." Those are Tovani's words, not mine.

The reason the millionth kick will be at St. Anselm's? That is the approximate location that little 6-year-old Gordon Tovani kicked his first football 40 years ago. Now at 46, he's still kicking.

Tomorrow's tour will start at the southern most tip of Marin County, Fort Baker, and reach each of 42 cities, towns and hamlets in the county. The tour will include 187½ miles of travel and an estimated eight hours of driving and place kicking time.

"I'VE DRIVEN the route and charted it all out," said Tovani, "and I've included every little town along the way."

Looking down the itinerary, I can see what he means. Have you been to Fallon, Tocoloma or Jewel lately?

"I'm going to rewrite the Guiness Book of Records and (Ripley's) Believe it or Not," says the man who has business cards proclaiming him as "World's Greatest Barefoot Place-Kicker" and "Dean of American Place-Kicking Coaches."

When he's not kicking footballs or telling stories about his kicking exploits, Tovani runs his own medical and surgical supply business in San Rafael.

THE KICKING countdown is at 45 before he reaches the 1,000,000 mark, so he is not getting in any practice licks. He claims to have logged an average of 72 kicks per day since he took up the art of kicking footballs with his bare toes exposed.

"Some of those kids have been with football shoes on," said Tovani, "but most of the time I kick barefooted."

Tovani said there will be four vans full of people, some of them kickers and others just along for the ride as the caravan snakes its way through Marvelous Marin. Dale Eidson, a former kicker at San Francisco State College who lost both legs last year in a July 4 fireworks accident, will be on hand, as will pro kicker Mike Mercer (Chargers) and high school and college kickers from the Bay Area.

BILL SOBERANES, Petaluma columnist who has a trademark of being photographed with celebs of all walks of life, has promised Tovani that he will be there to supervise picture taking at all 42 stops.

Eidson, fitted with artificial legs, will make his first kick since that fateful accident a year ago today, said Tovani, who has been coaching the young man.

Well, have a happy Fourth of July. Tovani is going to have a happy Fifth.

Here is Tovani's exact time schedule:

KINGMAN HOMERS TWICE

Phillies Bombard Giants' Carrithers

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—"I don't understand," says Juan Marichal of Don Carrithers. "He looks so good in warmups, but not in the games."

Carrithers, who manager Charlie Fox says has potentially the best arm on the pitching staff, failed to get a man out Monday night as the Phils scored four runs in the opening inning.

Novato's Frank Reberger came on to pitch well and San Francisco got two homers from Dave Kingman, who now has 20 for the season.

But when it was all over, Philadelphia had the 4-2 win and San Francisco's four-game win string was at an end.

The Giants tried to get going in the first off Steve Carlton, the shining light on an otherwise inept Phils pitching staff. Carlton had given the Giants only three runs in 18 innings prior to Monday night's meeting.

Bobby Bonds doubled and Willie McCovey walked with two out. But Kingman lined to the third baseman with a shot that could have easily knocked both men home had it gone an inch or two one way or the other.

Carlton, now 10-6, was in complete command the rest of the way except for the muscular Kingman, who hit his circuit clouts in the fourth and ninth innings.

After the game, it was announced that Carrithers will be out of the starting rotation for the duration of the current road trip, which ends after eight more games on July 12 in New York. Should tonight's Giants

DIRTY LANDING — An opened-mouth Steve Gough of the Falcon Track Club in Seattle, Wash. hit the sand pit after leaping 24-feet, 10-inches in the decathlon in the Olympic track and field trials at Eugene, Ore. yesterday. New Hampshire's Jeff Bannister was the leader in the decathlon going into today's action, while Gough was fifth.

TRACK IN EUGENE

Walker Young Seeks 2nd Olympic Trials Victory

EUGENE, Ore. (UPI)—Larry Young shoots for his second U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials victory today in the 50-kilometer walk and Jeff Bannister, a former New Hampshire star looking for his first major triumph, seeks to hold on to the lead in the conclusion of the 10-event decathalon.

Young, who prefers the 50-kilowalk, won the 20-kilo walk last Friday. He's a two-time Olympian and says if he makes it in the 50 today, he may give up his 20 berth, thus opening the way for Clark Scully of the Army to make the trip to Munich in August for his first Olympics. Clark was fourth in the 20 kilo walk and currently is listed as an alternate.

CONSISTENT

Bannister, now competing for the Decathlon Club of America, didn't win a single event in the first half of the decathlon Monday but he was the most consistent athlete in the 20-man field and stood at the top of the pack today with 4,263 points. In the high jump, fourth event of the day, Jeff cleared 6-6 for 840 points and the lead.

He concluded his first day's work in 97-degree heat with a 47.7 in the 400 meters for 913 more points and a comfortable 59-point lead on little Jeff Bennett of the Army, the Amateur Athletic Union champ who locked a sizzling 46.7 in the 400 to close the gap.

Fred Samara was in third place with 4,134 points, Russ Hodge was fourth with 4,119, Steve Gough was fifth with 4,097 and Andy Pettes was sixth with 4,089 as the first six men went over the 4,000 halfway mark.

PRETTY HAPPY

"I'm pretty happy with my first day's work," said Bannister, who is 26 and looking forward to winning an Olympic berth. "I hope I feel as well for the second day as I did in the first. I did well in the 400 meter run and my high jump was pretty good. I wish I would have done better, though, in the 100."

Samara had the best time in the 100 —10.5 to Bannister's 10.8 —while Hodge led the shot putting with a throw of 55-10 and Gough came up with a 24-10 long jump and Ray Hupp, 13th overall in the standings at the halfway mark, did 6-9 1-2 in the high jump.

BANNISTER

Bannister said the heat didn't bother him a bit and he won't mind it if it's warm again today. The forecast is for 100 degrees as the Willamette Valley is in the midst of a week-long heat wave that has proved a blessing in that it has kept the pollen rate down.

The 23-year old Bennett also found the heat agreeable.

The 1,500 meter run is the

Graham's Cleveland Golf Win

CHAGRIN FALLS, Ohio (UPI)—David Graham wasn't misty-eyed because he picked up $30,000 for winning the 1972 Cleveland Open golf tournament on his wife's birthday.

He was disappointed because the man he defeated on the second hole of sudden-death play Monday was his best friend, Bruce Devlin, "a fellow countryman."

"If there was anybody I would have liked to have beaten, it wasn't him (Devlin)," Graham said. "If it hadn't have been for Bruce I would still be in Australia.

PLAY HARD

"I told him when we started on the first hole that I wanted him to play as hard as he could because I was going to play as hard as I could. He did and so did I. I'm sure Bruce was very disappointed he lost, but happy that I won."

Graham, 26, of Sydney, Australia, was tied with Devlin at six-under-par 278 after 72-hole regulation play. Both bogeyed the first extra hole and on the second hole, after Graham sank his 10-foot putt for par, Devlin, 34, of Coral Gables, Fla., missed a downhill putt from the same distance and ended with a bogey 5.

CREDIT

Graham gave tremendous credit for his win to caddy Ernest (Creamy) Carolan, one of two assets he picked up from Arnold Palmer. The other was a set of clubs "that have won me $34,500 in the last two weeks."

"Arnie will never see these clubs again," said Graham as he kissed his putter. "But Creamy helped me a helluva lot.

"I stole him from Arnie. When you have a caddy that can tell you exactly how far it is from the fairway to the green, from the fairway to a trap or from the fairway to the pin, you've got a great caddy."

But since this was Graham's first PGA tour victory, which VICTORY DANCE — Golfer David Graham did a little dance on the 18th hole in the final round of the Cleveland Open yesterday at Chagrin Falls, Ohio after dropping a 12-foot birdie putt to get into a sudden-death playoff with Bruce Devlin. Bud Melges, 42, of Zenda, Wis., won the fourth race yesterday in the Soling Class of the Olympic team sailing trials on San Francisco Bay, but it left him in only seventh place overall today.

BELVEDERE

The event is being sponsored by San Francisco Yacht Club of Belvedere.

Lowell North of San Diego placed second, 2:27 behind the winner, but that moved him into first place in the overall standings. He has won a gold medal and bronze medal in past Olympics.

GOLDSMITH

Bruce Goldsmith of Winnetka, Ill., was fifth yesterday and is second overall while John Dane of New Orleans was third yesterday and is third overall.

Warick Tompkins of Mill Valley finished 19th yesterday and slipped a notch to sixth place in overall standings.

Tiburon Lad Faces Redondo

Walter Redondo, heralded junior champion from National City, San Diego County, defeated Mark Nicholson of Salt Lake City, 6-2, 6-3, in the highlight match of yesterday's opening action in the U.S. Junior Hardcourt Tennis Championships at Belvedere Tennis Club.

Redondo, third seed in the Boys 14 Division, today was to get a challenge from Cary Stansbury of Tiburon, last week's winner of the Pacific Coast championship in his age group. Stansbury drew a bye yesterday in the tournament for boys and girls 12 and 14.

Robert Greene of San Rafael lost his boys 14 match to Greg Hing of Scottsdale, Ariz., 6-3, 6-3, and Nita Gariaeff of San Anselmo was a 6-0, 6-1 victim of Sandra Collins of San Bernardino in Girls 14.

Kodes Faces Smith At Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)-Top-seeded Stan Smith of Pasadena, Calif., and Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia today qualified for a semi-final meeting at the 86th All-England lawn tennis championships with straight set victories in their men's singles quarterfinal matches.

The last time the pair met in a major championship was at Forest Hills last year where Smith beat the Czechoslovak in four sets to win the U.S. open title.

SMITH

Smith, playing on the no. 1 court, beat eighth-seeded Russian Alexander Metreveli, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2, while the fifth-seeded Kodes took unseeded Onny Parun of New Zealand, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4 in center court.

Meanwhile, Mike Machette of Belvedere, teamed with Raul Ramirez of Mexico, lost in doubles to Bob Hewitt and Frew McMillan of South Africa, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

The 26-year-old Kodes, who overcame his dislike of grass when he made it to the final at Forest Hills last year, rarely put a foot wrong and produced the big serve and volley game to sink the New Zealand no. 1 who made things tough for himself by committing unforced

Hunter Stops Angels, 5-0

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Jim (Catfish) Hunter doesn't underestimate the California Angels but he feels confident when he faces them and demonstrated his mastery again Monday night by hurling a two-hitter for a 5-0 Oakland A's shutout.

The hot hitting of first baseman Mike Epstein helped make Hunter's job easy as the former University of California star collected three hits for the second straight night and drove in three runs.

"I had good control and a good breaking ball," said Hunter. "I don't think they were looking for breaking pitches as much as fast balls, because I had a good fast ball the last time I beat them."

It was Hunter's third straight win over the Angels this season and the victory gave him a 9-4 mark and his eighth complete game of the season.

Hunter did not give up a hit for five innings as he made a bid to repeat his 1968 perfect game. But that was snapped by Angel catcher John Stephenson, who singled to open the sixth.

THE FANS

"The fans behind our dugout kept reminding me about a nohitter every time I came in, so I was thinking about it. But I mainly wanted to win." Hunter said.

Epstein said he had become a better hitter this year because he was playing every day.

"I'm trying to make the most of it," he said. "I had been platooned by other clubs in recent years. This season everything has fallen together nicely for me."

CONCERNED

Epstein would not deny he became a little concerned when the A's last week acquired first baseman Orlando Cepeda from Atlanta.

"But manager Dick Williams assured me he did not plan to platoon me with Cepeda. There's no question that Orlando will be a help to us. Williams said he got Cepeda to give us bench strength."

Epstein got three hits each night against lefthanded pitching to prove he could hit southpaws and didn't need to be platooned.

BOTH

Both Hunter and Epstein, however, paid tribute to Angel starter Rudy May, who took the loss. Epstein said May had "great stuff." May held the A's scoreless for six innings but Sal Bando doubled in the seventh and Epstein singled him home.

In the eighth, the A's loaded the bases with Epstein singling in two runs and Dave Duncan driving in two more when reliever Don Rose reloaded the bags.

Besides Stephenson, the only other Angel to get a hit was Andy Kosco who tripled with two out but was left stranded at third.

Changing Financial Plight Of Stoneham

First of Series

PHILADELPHIA — Just before the Giants left on this road trip, Horace Stoneham made a "complete denial" of reports that the ball club was up for sale.

Just before the Giants made their first road trip of 1972 to Philadelphia in early May, Stoneham made a move that he wouldn't have dreamed of making a few years ago. He entered serious talks with the New York Mets — trade talks dealing with the future security of his No. 1 star of two decades, Willie Mays. The fact that the trade ultimately was made is baseball history.

So what has the Mays trade to do with the sale reprots that popped up just before this trip? Nothing, except Stoneham's motivation for making the trade — a sincere concern for Mays' future.

"THE TALKS were conducted with the understanding that the Mets would find a place for Willie in their organization after his playing days are over in one or two years," said Stoneham. "It always was our intention to find a place for Willie in our own organization after his active days ended. But since the other team came into Oakland (the A's) things have changed."

Stoneham's allusion to the A's wasn't spelled out by the president of the Giants but it was obvious what he meant. Since the A's moved into Oakland, Candlestick Park attendance has sharply declined, except for last year when the Giants won the National League West flag. Meanwhile, Mays' salary went up to $165,000 a season.

NOW, THE POINT is this: Stoneham's concern for Mays' future certainly couldn't be greater than his concern or members of his family and their future.

Stoneham now is 70. He knows better than anyone else that he soon must make a decision about his successor, if the ball club is kept in the family as it has been since 1919 when it was bought by Stoneham's father, Charles A. Stoneham, from the estate of John T. Brush who owned the club after the turn of the century. Horace's father died in 1936 and he has been running the club ever since.

TO SAY STONEHAM is a one-man operation of the Giants would be over-emphasizing things. He has plenty of front office lieutenants but he makes the final decisions after listening to lots of advice which often is conflicting, particularly about the ability of promising young ball players.

Stoneham's personal knowledge of young ball players and their ability is far from superficial. He has been watching baseball since he was knee high. He doesn't have to be told by his scouts whether a shortstop has good range to the left and right and can throw from the hole.

Last year when Chris Speier was a non-roster rookie in the spring training camp of the Giants, Stoneham tipped baseball writers covering the team to keep an eye on Speier.

"IF WE'RE WRONG about that young man we know nothing about baseball," said Stoneham.

Aside from his baseball knowledge, Stoneham is a smart business man. He's swung several real estate deals that enhanced the treasury of National Exhibition Company, legal owner of the Giants, by several million dollars.

"He's one of the smartest business men I've ever met," says Shirley Gray, a millionaire Chicago electrical contractor who is a director of NEC.

What member of Stoneham's family could qualify as his successor, with a combination of baseball and business talents?

COLLISION — Texas Ranger catcher Hal King sent Kansas City Royal catcher Jerry May (12) sprawling at home plate yesterday in Kansas City during the second inning. King jarred the ball loose out of May's glove by barrelling into the backstop after coming home from third base on pitcher Mike Paul's bunt. (UPI Telephoto)

FISH AND GAME

The Unpredictable Bay Striper Fishing

By AL GIDDINGS

You never really can tell about this fishing. This past week (not including Saturday and Sunday) striper fishing in the Bay at certain spots was torrid. Even Bill Boyle, the Loch Lomond Live Bait Barge owners got out one day with a friend. They tried The Brothers Islands — nothing. They moved over to The Sisters Islands on the Marin side and in an hour or so had six bass, 11 to 17 pounds, using shiners on the incoming tide. Sam Knoles, who practically lives on his boat, got the word and in short order he landed three — 16, 14 and 11 pounds. The party boats have been working The Brothers and are generally keeping their customers happy.

SALMON FISHING outside the "Gate" must have been good, too. Bob Locki of the LoHat brought Mary, my wife, a 15-pounder for her diet. Locki said she wouldn't have to jump on that fish to make it legal which usually is the case when Sam Knoles (Locki's buddy) gives a fish away!

If you see Sam this week, just look at him and shake your head. The results will amaze you. It seems this past week Sam grabbed Locki's rod when a huge fish had just grabbed the bait. Sam gave the rod the set of all sets, snapping Locki's line — and away went the prize! Locki said nothing —just shook his head!

Saturday was windy outside, though a good number of small fish were taken near the center grounds and Duxberry according to reports. Sunday, with the fog inland again, it was calm outside. Remember, the winds blow at the edge of the fog — that's why it was so rough Saturday in San Pablo. If it's foggy outside, it's generally calm too.

About 200,000 silver salmon were stocked in the Navarro and Ten Mile Rivers in Mendocino County in June. The fish were all fingerling-size and came from the new Mad River Hatchery in Humboldt County.

Usually each week I receive a report of the Golden Gate Sportfisher's Salmon Derby. Never have I noted a name of a Marin County angler in the list of prize winners. But this past week Hal Bruster's name showed up. Hal, being from Corte Madera, won fourth price, a Garcia Ambassadeur Baitcasting reel for this 28-pound salmon. The leader so far in the Derby is Jack Cuddy of San Francisco with his 37-pound, 10-ounce fish.

No trout plants were made this week with the lake water temperatures too high.

IN A YEAR when the normal food supply is short and bears have come out of hibernation earlier than usual, marauding bears are causing problems for campers, the Department of Fish and Game revealed today.

In some areas the normal food for black bears — berries, nuts, tubers, insects, grubs, eggs, honey, carrion and some small mammals —is in short supply because of the very dry year.

In these circumstances, bears may seek out areas of human habitation for food, raiding ice chests, picnic baskets, summer cabins and trash cans.

THE DFG ADVISED campers to take no action themselves against raiding bears, but to contact the department for assistance. "Don't put yourself in a compromising position by cornering a hungry bear," a spokesman said.

In a joint program on one of the more critical areas, the U.S. Forest Service and the DFG are cooperating in an attempt to alleviate the bear hazards to forest users and their property.

Forest visitors can help, the announcement said, by keeping garbage away from the occupancy area, not feeding bears, washing everything that comes in contact with food and using secure food storage areas away from sleeping areas.

"IF THE BEAR can smell the food," the joint announcement said, "he will try to get it. They are extremely agile climbers, very strong and have an excellent sense of smell. They have been known to play catch with an ice chest full of food."

The agencies are attempting to relocate depredating bears rather than destroy them. "Let us know about problem bears and we'll have skilled trappers relocate them safely," the agencies said.

Depredating bears can be taken only after a permit has been issued by the DFG.

exempts him from qualifying for all future events through next year's Cleveland Open, he didn't know how much he should pay Creamy." But being witty, Graham had a good come-back.

CADDY

"Thanks, mate, you're a helluva caddy," said Graham to Carolan as he handed him a Canadian penny for his help. "I have no idea of how much I should pay you."

Devlin, who is on his way to Scotland to qualify for the British Open after picking up $17,100 for his second place finish, said Americans would see a lot of Graham in the future.

"Most folks don't know what it is like to win a tour event in America." Devlin said. "Now David does and you'll be seeing a lot of him in the future.

'VOLATILE'

"He was very unusual, very volatile and he blew up easy. He had no emotional control. If I helped him in some small way, I'm glad to say that I did."

Larry Hinson, 27 of Douglas, Ga., who either led or shared first place in the standings for the first three rounds, had five bogeys and two birdies in the final round for a five-under-par 279 and got $10,650 for his third-place finish. He said he "learned a lot this week, but wasn't ashamed to admit that the pressure was on."

Miller Barber, who shot three rounds under 70 during the tournament, but had a disastrous 74 on Sunday, finished with four under 280, as did Lanny Wadkins, who shared the third-round lead with Hinson. Barber had a two-under 69 in the final round and Wadkins, who fell from the lead when he bogeyed the first two holes, a 74.

KNUDSON

George Knudson, who surged into a tie for the lead at one point in the final round only to fall from contention in the closing stages, finished with a three-under 281, while defending champion Bobby Mitchell led a group of five at 282. Napa's Ron Cerrudo closed with a 286.

The final round was pushed back by a day until Monday when Thursday's scheduled first round had to be cancelled and the course was hit by nearly two and half inches of rain.

Orioles Rip Tigers; Boston, Texas Win

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Baltimore Orioles are feathering their nest with Tiger fur.

The fur really flew Monday night as Baltimore ripped Detroit 15-3, for the Orioles' ninth win in 13 meetings with the Tigers this season. The win also made it three of four in the latest series and deadlocked the two clubs for the American League East lead, five games ahead of the pack.

Baltimore pelted six Tiger pitchers for 21 hits, the most a Detroit mound staff has given up since Cleveland launched a similar assault on July 17, 1966.

In the only other scheduled American League games, Boston downed Minnesota, 8-2; Texas edged Kansas City, 2-1, and Oakland shut out California, 5-0.

Boston stretched its winning string to four games as Luis Tiant drove in two runs with a single to earn his third win in five decisions.

Mike Paul won his third game and contributed toward Texas' first run with a squeeze bunt, but it was Don Mincher's run-scoring double in the top of the seventh inning that decided the Rangers' narrow victory over Kansas City.

SMITH

PLAN

Metreveli was unlucky to hit the tape at least a dozen times. Against this he also racked up a lot of points exploiting Smith's tremulous backhand, which is by far his weakest shot.

Pressed into ill-judged backhand lobs, Smith put them up as fodder for the Russian to kill unfailingly.

BEST TENNIS

Smith played his best tennis of the tournament in the opening five games of the first set, breaking the Russian's opening service for 2-0 with flowing drives on either side.

Smith showed his confidence by surging up to and commanding the net more resolutely than he did in earlier games. He looked so sure that the seventh game had just seven strokes: three Smith services, three Metreveli netters and an ace. Smith broke the Russian again for the set 6-2 when Metreveli's forehand volley dropped into the tramlines.

Smith dropped service immediately in the second by foolishly feeding Metreveli's powerful forehand on service and during rallies.

RHYTHM

But Smith's rhythm had broken and he did not take a point from Metreveli's next three service games. Metreveli allowed him to steady again with a mixture of delightful volleys and those fatally loose backhands.

In the 14th game Smith ran to 15-40 with three dazzling winners before Metreveli put an overhead volley wide and dropped the set 6-8.

The third set was the same as before with Metreveli denying Smith a point in anothar three service games. Metreveli's confidence was ebbing, as he double-faculted four times and fluffed several strokes to drop his opening service. Again Smith set up the break at 30-40 in the eighth and Metreveli floated a lob wide to vanish from the tournament.

IN MARIN SWIMMING

League Continues Dual Meet Season

By PAUL CANE

The nine-team Marin County Swim League continues its summer dual meet season this weekend, preparing for the league championship meet in August.

According to former league president Calvin Broomhead, the summer league involves private clubs, park and recreation department-sponsored teams, and community-center squads.

Broomhead, now coach of the Rafael Racquet Club is himself a "graduate" of the Marin Swim League program. "Ninety per cent of all the kids aren't champions. We try to develop a good, healthy idea about competition for everyone, and at the same time try to be kind of a social mixer with the other clubs."

THE 9TH ANNUAL MSL Championships will be held all day Aug. 20 at the College of Marin in Kentfield, under the directorship of Ann Curtis Cuneo of Terra Linda, an Olympic swimming gold medalist in 1948.

Besides the Rafael Racquet and Ann Curtis teams, the other participants are: Terra Linda Park and Rec, San Marin Swim and Tennis Club, Lucas Valley Community Center, Tiburon Peninsula Club, Strawberry Swim Club, Sleepy Hollow Swim Club, and the Marinwood Community Center.

"It's a good outlet for the kids' energies. By the end of the year, though, it is often more of a drain on the parents, who drive the kids to practice and officiate at the meets," Broomhead joked.

SIMILAR IN structure to the publicized Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) age-group program, the MSL is divided into boys and girls categories in five age groups: Eight-and-under, 9-10, 11-12, 13-14 and 15-17. Holders of a 1972 AAU membership card, however, are ineligible.

Eight-and-unders swim 25-yard distances in all strokes, while others swim 50-yard races. All age groups also have a 100-Yard individual medley event, which is a combination of the four competitive strokes. In the 15-17 age class there is also a 100 free.

BROOMHEAD SAYS he speaks for most league coaches in assuring that the MSL is not designed to compete with the AAU program.

"In AAU the goal is to push the top kids to find the highest quality of swimmer. We hope for personal development of all kinds, not just faster times, although we always get a lot of those, too."

SEVERAL MSL swimmers are ex-AAU athletes, while an equal number of the summer leaguers have gone on to do well with the local AAU clubs. Many participants in the MSL, say coaches, are just beginning to learn the basic strokes.

Most clubs work out 1-1½ hours per day, May through the culmination of the season with the Championships in August.

Pirates' Win Aided By Stargell Homer

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Knights of the Pittsburgh Pirates' Round Table Sluggers, with Willie Stargell presiding, agreed Monday night that rookie pitcher Burt Hooton of the Chicago Cubs "is a good one."

"He shouldn't be discouraged," said Stargell. "It was about the only mistake the kid made all night."

One mistake is all a pitcher is allowed against the fearsome Pittsburgh batting order, of course, and the one Hooton made was slammed into the left field stands by Stargell for a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning and gave the Pirates a 3-2 victory over the Cubs.

The Atlanta Braves outslugged the Houston Astros, 13-9, the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 4-2, and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the San Francisco Giants, 4-2, in other N.L. games. New York's double-header at Monlreal was rained out.

Hank Aaron raised his career homer total to 656 —58 behind Babe Ruth's all-time record — with his fourth in six games and 17th of the season in the Atlanta-Houston slugfest. Aaron's three-run homer in the seventh inning also raised his career RBI total to 2,000 — making him the first player in N.L. history to reach that mark.

Donohue Escapes Serious Injury

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

GAINESVILLE, Ga. — Mark Donohue's Porsche came apart on the back straight of Road Atlanta Monday in private practice and hurtled off the course at 160 miles an hour, but Donohue was not seriously injured.

The 35-year-old driver suffered pulled ligaments in his right knee leaping from the car after it rolled. But he said "If at all possible we will race" in the second of the Canadian-American Challenge Cup Series at Road Atlanta Sunday.

Team manager Roger Penske had mechanics at work immediately pulling the engine from the wrecked car and dropping it into a spare body the team carries.

"If at all possible we will race in the Sunday race, hopefully starting with practice on Friday," Donohue said after being admitted to Hall County Hospital in Gainesville. "The question will not be the car, but whether or not I am able to race."

Physicians ordered therapy for Donohue's knee.

COMPTON'S INDUSTRIAL PARK — A few years ago open wasteland which belonged to the county and not Compton covered the site of the city's industrial park. This 382,000 square foot warehouse-office for Nissan Motor Corp. is typical of the industrial park.

Compton, It's A New City

By CHARLES E. DOLE

COMPTON — At first glance, the place looks run down at the heels. The storefronts are old, the houses out of date, the the whole operation seems anything but viable.

The community is 70 per cent black. And like municipalities all over the country there just isn't enough money to do all the jobs that scream for action.

Clearly, this city on the very edge of Los Angeles is a microcosm of all the urban problems which challenge and confuse the nation.

Yet, there's a difference. Compton has pride and the people seem to care.

That's the impression one gets after driving around the city, talking with a few of the residents, and visiting the city hall. The people are involved. The city manager's office, for instance, puts out a periodic community newsletter which goes to everyone in the city.

Mayor Douglas F. Dollarhide and City Manager James C. Johnson were out of their office when I made my impromptu visit the other day. But Berton K. Wills was on hand, a likeably, outgoing kind of fellow who had been assistant city manager for the City of Compton for the past two years.

White and young, Mr. Wills admits he doesn't live in Compton, but says he's enthusiastic about the place and speaks frankly of its problems and hopefully of where it is going.

In nearby Watts, the black ghetto of Los Angeles that burst into flames in 1965, home ownership, according to Mr. Wills, runs to no more than 15 per cent, while in Compton it is 60 per cent or higher. That makes a tremendous difference. Where there is ownership involved, there is more stability and less likelihood of violence and its concomitant of property damage.

Also, Compton has a burgeoning industrial park, where, until a few years ago, there was only open wasteland which belonged to the county and not to Compton.

The city used to be almost all white. Incorporated in 1888, it has long been a bedroom community for the entire South Bay area, including Long Beach.

But in the period of a single decade, it moved from a white, middle-class suburban city to a predominantly black, middle-class industrially based city.

Now the city is run almost entirely by blacks, with few clear exceptions. The police chief is white. Mayor Dollarhide was the first black mayor of the largest predominantly black city west of the Mississippi River.

It was in this context that Cobot, Cabot & Forbes, one of the largest industrial real-estate development firms in the United States, moved into the area in 1968, jsut three years after the Watts explosion. When CC&F paid $14.7 million for 540 acres, almost everyone thought the company was naive and foolish.

But then Gerald F. Blakeley, CC&F president, began to develop an industrial park, ideally situated close to the Los Angeles International Airport as well as the harbors of the Los Angeles and Long Beach.

The land, part of the county, had long been available but no one would touch it. After Mr. Blakeley took over, he got the land annexed by Compton, usually no small deal.

The industrial park has boomed, not bombed as many had thought it would. So far there are 35 buildings up with half of them built on speculation. Only three still are empty.

Value of the park so far is $125 million with full development put at double that figure. A third of the occupants are foreign firms, nine of them Japanese.

Out of 3,000 now on the payroll in the park, 47 per cent are minority workers. Only several hundred live in Compton.

What the park is doing for Compton is providing a sort of catalyst to get the city moving again. It indicates the confidence of a major real-estate developer in the future of the area. Too, it is whetting the city's enthusiasm in developing a solid industrial base, vital to the economic success of the city.

Already the city is building a new civic center, to include a 14-story county courthouse building and library. The city also will get a new city hall, badly needed, city officials say. When fully developed the civic center is expected to employ up to 2,000 workers.

"The people are motivated by all of this," declares Mr. Wills, "but if the town doesn't make visible progress in the next couple years, frustration could result."

Clearly, the road is uphill but the town seems to be moving. And that's not easy these days, especially if the city is mostly black.

When you compare what Compton is doing or trying to do, however, with other black-majority cities around the country, the urban transition appears to be making some progress.

Your Next Office May Have A Pool

NEW YORK (AP) — If you could take a break from your officework to swim, tend a garden or just reflect, you'd probably also do more work, a motivational research expert says.

Ernest Dichter, president of the Motivational Research Institute of Croton-on-Hudson, N.Y., says, "Once people realize they can have fun at their job, they'll be better producers."

Dichter, who serves as a consultant to corporations, blames part of "the alienation of office workers toward their jobs" on the design of the offices themselves.

"We used to build offices and then try to fit people into them," he says.

The research executive predicts the office building of the future will be much like a home or apartment.

"I don't see anything wrong with a boss dictating to his secretary on a balcony or having a place on the roof or on the grounds where an employee can plant radishes in his free time," he says.

Dichter proposes that office building designs include a "thinking tower," a sort of "womb" into which frazzled executives can retreat. The tower, which would be separate form the main office space, might have a couch, bar, television set or dictation equipment, but no telephone or clock, he says.

"In most offices today there's no place where an executive can withdraw," Dichter says.

The permanently sealed windows of modern buildings need be no deterrent to installing flower boxes outside offices, says Dichter, who proposed that employees water the boxes from inside by a tube that would go through the window.

He feels the ideal location for an office building is a campus setting in the country or suburbs, where both trees and parking space is in abundance.

"There's no reason for people to work in city offices," Dichter says.

For those who must remain in urban skyscrapers, life could be made more pleasant if swimming pools and gardens were put on office building roofs, he says.

New Idea For Marin County Possible In Auto Flea Market

An auto flea market may open in San Rafael in a month or two at 21 Bellam Boulevard, in the parking area of the Motor Movies.

Peter G. Basich of Corte Madera plans to use the motor movies parking area during daylight hours on weekends. Basich will rent space to owners of cars, boats and trailers who want to sell or trade at the Auto Flea Market. "It will be do-it-yourself selling," said Basich.

He hopes to start his automobile flea market sometime in August. It will operate on Saturdays and Sundays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Each car or boat owner would pay about $8 per vehicle and if he cannot sell it on Saturday, he could return the next day without additional charge.

Basich operated bakeries in the Bay Area for 25 years. He said the car flea market is something new for Marin, but he thinks there is a definite need for a central location where owners and buyers can get together to sell or barter.

Computers That Talk Hold Many Possibilities

NEW YORK (UPI)—By the end of this century, electronic computers may be able to talk and that will make every push-button telephone a computer terminal.

The long-range implications for business are tremendous. Automatic record keeping and access to information stored in computers would be easily available by voice to every telephone user without any special equipment except possibly a tape recorder.

The prediction that the computer can be taught to talk was made by Dr. James Flanagan of Bell Telephone Laboratories at Murray Hill, N.J., in the Journal of Accoustical Society of America.

Dr. Flanagan made it plain that computers will really talk —they won't just dig out prerecorded messages to transmit. Back at the 1939 World's Fair in New York, Bell Labs shouted a curious machine called the Voder on which an operator produced crude human speech by playing on a keyboard.

But the new computer talk will be clear and articulate. It will actually reproduce human speech in any desired language mechanically and use it to transmit fairly long speeches from information stored in the computer's memory.

Teaching the computer to compose speeches and to talk would remove the main stumbling block to the rapid extension of computerized services to many new business and specialactivities.

Much headway already is being made in some of these fields, according to International Business Machines Corp., in spite of the costliness of present printout, display and input equipment.

IBM listed traffic control, medical care delivery, court calendar control and legal research, police management and protection against crime, city planning and corporate decision making as the new frontiers on which computer science is forging ahead most rapidly.

A talking computer could save many precious minutes in hospitals. A surgeon in the operating room could talk to a computer about a patient's history or the results of tests instead of waiting for the data to be brought to him. Doctors could obtain other information from a patient's record stored in the computer instantaneously through the ordinary bedside telephone.

Association Formed To Provide Voice

LOS ANGELES — Formation of the Computer Industry Association to provide a "single voice" for the data processing industry has been announced.

It is a nonprofit trade group which will have offices in Encino, Calif. and Washington.

First Quarter Taxable Sales Show Increase

Taxable sales in California ballooned to a new first-quarter peak of $11.7 billion, 13.1 per cent above the 1971 first quarter, according to William M. Bennett, member of the State Board of Equalization.

The year-to-year percentage growth was the largest for any quarter since 1959.

Taxable sales in Marin County for the first quarter were up 18.1 per cent for a total of $93,981,000.

Statewide, soaring sales were noted in several types of businesses: New car dealers, up 15.5 per cent; building materials, up 26.5 per cent; mobile homes, trailers and campers, up 39 per cent; household and home furnishings, up 15.5 per cent; farm implements, up 27 per cent and boat, motorcycle and plane dealers, up 22 per cent.

Sharing Land Could Raise Tax Revenues For Schools

NEW YORK (UPI)—The larger American cities should start getting tax revenue from the billions of dollars worth of real estate devoted to public schools, says a Boston architect.

Richard Heydecker, whose firm, Korslund, LeNormand & Quann, specializes in school projects, said the way to accomplish this is for business and the schools to share use of the land.

Several such projects have been built in New York and Philadelphia—high-rise apartment structures built on city owned land with a school occupying the lower floors. The land itself is tax exempt but the cities collect substantial taxes on the apartment buildings, more than enough to pay the rent on the school space.

Heydecker said he expects this trend to spread to Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and other big cities, where public officials are desperately seeking to increase the property tax base.

Although it's much simpler to work out such a multi-use project on city-owned land, it could be done on privately assembled land tracts, Heydecker said. In that case, the land itself would pay taxes and the part of the structure containing the school space would be tax exempt.

In addition to the need for more tax revenue through the multiple use of urban land, Heydecker said the architect in the public school field today is up against a staggering need to be realistic and economical. Capital outlays in the United States for public school building are dropping $200 million this year to $4.9 billion, he said.

He said skyrocketing land prices and the need to keep land on the tax rolls sooner or later will force suburban communities to stop building one-story schools that spread over many acres.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Private Investors Aren't Pushed Out

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. You have in the past discussed the increasing dominance of the institutions on the stockmarket. Does this mean that individual investors are going to be squeezed out entirely?—O.M.

A. By no means. In 1971 there were 32.5 million individual shareholders according to a study made by the New York Stock Exchange. By 1975 this figure is expected to reach 40 million.

Furthermore, the same report shows that the average size of an order placed by public shareholders has increased substantially in the last two years.

In 1961, the ratio of trading volume on the NYSE between the two sectors was approximately two-thirds individual transactions versus one-third institutional orders. However, by 1971, institutions accounted for 60 per cent of the shares sold and private individuals 40 per cent.

Included in the 60 per cent are transactions made by banks and others administering personal trust funds for individuals. Over the 10-year span there has been strong growth in both types of transactions, combining to increase the total size of the market about four-fold.

However, institutional growth has outpaced that of the private sector so that the importance of their relative roles has reversed in the past decade.

Q. Hope you can advise me about United Shoe Machinery which has reduced its dividend. I need the income to help with my expenses. — M.G.

A. USM, formerly United Shoe Machinery, reported sharply lower earnings in both fiscal 1970 and 1971, hence the two reductions in the dividend rate last year. While the discontinuance of several unprofitable operations has improved the profit picture for the current year, the now uncertain dividend rate negates the appeal of this issue for an income investor.

In my view, you would be better off switching into a high-yield utility such as Central Maine Power. This issue also trades on the Big Board and in the same price range as USM but it returns a generous 6.8 per cent.

Some Pressure On Equal Rights Bill

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—A Democratic assemblyman challenging the Senate power structure disclosed yesterday he has rounded up more than half the support he needs to force the controversial "Equal Rights for Women" amendment out of the Senate Rules Committee.

Assemblyman Walter Karabian of Monterey Park disclosed that 11 senators, including four Republicans, have signed letters to the powerful committee demanding that the legislation be sent directly to the Senate floor for a vote.

He needs the written support of at least 21 senators to force withdrawal of the measure from the committee, a highly unusual and rarely successful procedure.

The committee, headed by Senate leader James R. Mills, D-San Diego, has turned down Senate versions of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution and has bottled up Karabian's version.

The measure would give California's ratification to the amendment. The ratification of 38 states is required before the proposal would be written into the constitution. Twenty states have ratified it.

The five-member Rules Committee, representing the epitome of the Senate power structure, has split 2-3 against the amendment.

Karabian announced that Republican Sens. Donald Grunsky of Watsonville, Lou Cusanovich of Los Angeles and John Nejedly of Walnut Creek along with Democrat David Roberti of Los Angeles have added their support to his campaign to withdraw the legislation from the committee.

Their endorsement followed in the wake of an intensive behind-the-scenes lobbying campaign by women's rights groups, who have made no secret of the fact this is an election year.

Other senators who favor withdrawal include Democrats Mervyn Dymally of Los Angeles, George Moscone of San Francisco, Anthony Beilenson of Beverly Hills, Nicholas Petris of Oakland, and Arlen Gregorio of San Mateo. Republicans include Sens. Clair Burgener of San Diego and Peter Behr of San Rafael.

Subdivision Review Set In Sausalito

A tentative subdivision map for a 204-unit subdivision on 160 acres of Sausalito's Wolfback Ridge will be considered by the city council at 8 p.m. tomorrow in City Hall.

Last week the Sausalito Planning Commission decided the land could be developed as long as certain natural features — springs, knolls, ridge lines and stands of trees — are preserved.

The commission thus rejected a recommendation from the city's open space committee which had proposed the ridge be preserved as open space "if at all possible." If development must occur in the area, the committee suggested that the natural features be saved.

The council declined to make a final decision on the subdivision last month, deciding to await the open space committee report and recommendation of the planning commission.

In other business, the council will consider a plan by City Mgr. Albert St. Cyr to remove the parking meters in two municipal parking areas and turn them into attendant lots.

Bremer Removed To Hospital For Exam

BALTIMORE (UPI) —Arthur H. Bremer, accused of shooting Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, was moved from the Baltimore County Jail yesterday to a state hospital for mental examination.

FBI agents took Bremer, 21, from the tightly guarded jail before dawn to the maximum security Clifton T. Perkins State Hospital at Jessup

Bangladesh Leaders Meet With Connally

DACCA (UPI)—U.S. Presidential envoy John B. Connally Monday had a 100-minute meeting with Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and talks with the Bangladesh foreign and finance ministers.

Connally gave no details of his discussions, other than to say his talk with Mujib was "fine, frank and fruitful." Mujib declined to comment to newsmen on the talks or on a message from President Nixon handed over by the former U.S. secretary of the treasury.

Lester Cancels

ATLANTA (UPI)—For the first time in his career Georgia Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox canceled a speech Monday. He said an airline strike left him with three hours sleep, his wife suffered a virus attack and a sister underwent major surgery.

Reform Drug Plan Clears Key Hurdle

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A massive reform package proposed by Gov. Ronald Reagan to overhaul the state's drug abuse rehabilitation program cleared the powerful Senate Finance Committee yesterday.

The bill, carried by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, would give first-time narcotics offenders a second chance by diverting them out of the criminal justice system.

The bill's keystone feature would take the first-time drug offenders out of the court system and put them under locally operated community narcotics and drug education programs. Deukmejian said the measure would "reduce considerably the clogging of the courts with first-time offenders."

The measure also would strike harder at curbing widespread use of drugs in California by melding fragmented government-sponsored and privately-operated narcotics programs into one unit.

On a 10-1 vote, the committee sent the bill, which carried a $8.35 million appropriation, to the floor.

The measure would also create a state licensing system for both public and private community traatment programs. Private clinics could not receive state funds until they met the license requrement.

Several witnesses representing privately operated drug education and treatment programs have voiced fear that state licensure could upset the delicate relationship they have with drug addicts seeking help.

Antitrust Action Against Airline

HONOLULU (UPI) — Aloha Airlines has entered an antitrust action against Hawaiian Airlines, its inter-island competitor.

Aloha filed a $23 million damage suit Monday charging that Hawaiian began a program in 1968 to eliminate competition, and violated the antimonopoly provisions of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Burglar Drops In And Has A Bite

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI)—A hungry burglar dropped into the Castle restaurant, police reported Monday.

The burglar crashed through the building's ceiling and landed on a table. Officers said he held a startled janitor at bay and prepared himself a ham sandwich before exiting via the door.
